

Gunman captured after taking hostage in drug robbery

by JOE SWICKARD
A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lylo Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was uninjured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident. According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet. Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

City will get clearer picture of bus costs

by STEVE BROWN
Des Plaines officials should get a clearer picture early next month as to how much bus transportation will cost the city in the future.

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said officials of the North Suburban Mass Transit District (NORTAN) will supply him with a cost analysis for the continued operation of Des Plaines bus routes in two or three weeks.

15,000 area homes left without power

An electrical failure left more than 15,000 Northwest suburban homes without power late Monday. Sections of Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Palatine, Prospect Heights and Wheeling lost electricity shortly before 4 p.m. because of damage to "feeder lines" in Arlington Heights, according to a Commonwealth Edison Co. spokesman. The power failure had no connection with electrical outages due to Sunday's heavy rainstorm, the spokesman said. There was no indication early Monday evening when power would be restored.

Road projects to resume

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready mix drivers and material haulers. Union members will vote Friday on a pact that includes $10.50 in hourly raises over three years. One of the largest local projects delayed by the strike, the Dundee Road repaving, will resume next week if the strike ends as expected, state officials said Monday.

NEC school hearing set

County School Supt. Richard Martwick has scheduled a Wednesday hearing into charges that students at Dwyer School in Arlington Heights were physically punished and that unqualified personnel were used as teachers. An NEC official blamed "disgruntled staff members" for the investigation but one of six teachers who complained said he was evaluated "by people who had never been in my classroom."

Hein, Metzger probe targets

Wheeling Trustee William Hein and Plan Comr. Jack Metzger are the object of a State's Attorney's investigation into conflict of interest and secret land trusts. The Herald has learned. Another plan commission member, Gilbert Monson, presented a complaint to the state's attorney's office last week prompting the probe. Although details of Monson's allegations could not be learned, Hein has been accused of conflicts of interest for village purchases from his family auto-parts store Metzger has been criticized for selling billboard signs to developers who have appeared before the plan commission.

Firm head faces sentence

The president of a Northbrook excavating firm who pleaded guilty to laundering a $40,000 payoff extorted by Wheeling political boss James Stavros will be sentenced today in U.S. District Court. Willis Clark, 59, of 218 S. Elm Rd., Palatine, pleaded guilty last month to filing a false corporate income tax return for 1970. His attorney is expected to present evidence that Clark was unaware that the $40,000 payment was extorted by Stavros, who is now in prison for extortion.

Cyclist, 12, hit by auto

A 12-year-old Buffalo Grove youth was seriously injured Monday when struck by an auto while riding his bicycle on Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz Road in Wheeling. The boy, William Walthall, 1219 Elton Ct., was taken to Holy Family Hospital in what was described as "bad" condition by police. Driver of the auto, Angela K. Armstrong, 20, of 159 Downing Rd., Buffalo Grove, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Teachers, board reach accord

A tentative agreement has been reached between negotiators for the Prospect Heights Education Assn. and the Prospect Heights Dist. 21 Board of Education on a 1974-75 teacher contract. Terms of the agreement are being withheld but it is believed to provide an approximate 12 per cent total increase in salary and fringe benefits.

GOP sheriff's candidate declares:

Forest preserves 'unsafe for family'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Five Cook County forest preserves — including Palatine's Deer Grove and Des Plaines' Beck Lake — are "considered by local residents as unsafe for family use," the Republican candidate for county sheriff said Monday.

Sheriff's police should begin patrols of the problem-plagued preserves, which are now controlled by preserve rangers, Peter Bensinger said.

"Cook County's major public recreation facilities, the county forest preserves, are being wasted because many of the county's residents are afraid to enter," Bensinger said. "Several major forest preserves are off limits to the law-abiding because the lawless have taken over."

Bensinger's four-point program for "meaningful law enforcement" in the forest preserves includes:

- Immediate control of forest preserve rangers by the sheriff. The rangers currently are forest preserve district employees and are "untrained and inadequate" to control "violent crime."

- Elimination of "unqualified" rangers and hiring of qualified rangers as sheriff's police. A 1967 study by Arthur Blick, the first executive director of the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission, found that "the primary basis for recruitment and promotion of rangers was patronage."

- Addition of more "trained police personnel as needed . . . assigning additional sheriff's police youth officers to preserves during peak usage periods."

- Increase in forest preserve patrols and use of horse patrols. Mounted patrols, with radios, would patrol areas not accessible to patrol cars.

BENSINGER BLAMED forest preserve problems on his November-election opponent, Sheriff Richard Elrod, who "has refused to take responsibility for law enforcement in these areas, leaving the task to forest preserve rangers who are not adequately staffed or trained to handle crime control," Bensinger said at a Chicago press conference where he named Deer Grove, Beck Lake, Waukegan Lake, Pioneer Woods and Schiller Park preserves.

A spokesman for Elrod said that "the forest preserves are not our primary responsibility. They're under the jurisdiction of the county board. If they want to give us the rangers, that's fine."

"The sheriff said the same thing four years ago," the spokesman said. "So what's new? They should talk to (County Board President) George Dunne about it."

Sheriff's police "work closely with the rangers," the spokesman said. "We answer numerous responses in the preserves."

With 274 police, the sheriff patrols 256 square miles of unincorporated Cook County. "We don't have the manpower now to add on the forest preserves," the spokesman said.

Bensinger's "position paper" estimated that hiring of qualified rangers as sheriff's police would add $300,000 to the

$1 million ranger budget. The increase could be financed with "more than $300,000 in waste due to patronage in the sheriff's court services division alone."

BENSINGER CLAIMED that Elrod "has failed to listen to others who have suggested that rangers cannot provide needed law enforcement." In 1972, Edmund Dobbs, chief of sheriff's police, estimated that doubling patrol manpower would provide preserve law enforcement. "Richard Elrod did not listen to his own chief at that time," Bensinger said.

RTA board member Kemp loses fight to ban taping

RTA board member James Kemp of Chicago lost a bid Monday to ban tape recorders from public meetings of the Regional Transportation Authority.

Kemp said he didn't want tape recorders present because board members might say something in the heat of discussion that they wish they hadn't, or might wish to correct. He also said recorders include clearing of throats, pauses, and blowing of noses, and that might reduce the dignity of the board. "We have enough problems without that," he said.

"In light of Watergate, I agree with that," said board member Richard Newland of Waukegan.

"AT LEAST A tape doesn't lie," said board member D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston. He questioned extension of the ban to television cameras as well. "When we're in public we're public," he said. "If we belch it goes on record."

The board postponed the ban on tape recorders at least until it gets a legal opinion on the action. The recorders may be banned at a later date.

The board also has made preparations to receive more than $8.5 million that has accumulated for the RTA's use in the Illinois Dept. of Transportation. The funds were held up because the General Assembly failed to sign the IDOT appropriations by July 1. The bills have since been passed and await Gov. Daniel Walker's signature.

SPECIAL STEPS will be taken to get the RTA money in a matter of days, instead of weeks, according to information given to board member Ernest Marsh of Chicago.

The board has postponed consideration of many requests for meetings with transportation districts and firms while attention is given to the selection of the ninth member, who will be the full-time chairman. A heavy schedule for chairman candidate interviews has been set up by the board, with meetings Monday, Wednesday and Friday of this week and next week.

Makarios alive, revolt rages on Cyprus

MAKARIOS OF CYPRUS

From United Press International
President Makarios of Cyprus urged his supporters to rally against a violent overthrow of his government Monday, making false his enemy's claim that the 60-year-old leader of the island nation was killed in the sudden coup.

Makarios broadcast an appeal over a clandestine radio station which was monitored in Tel Aviv late Monday. The Swedish government also confirmed that the President was still alive and sought United Nations protection. A Swedish U. N. battalion stationed on the island cabled a report that Makarios has sought refuge in a British Cyprus base and had cabled U. N. headquarters in New York for intervention.

National Guard officers, seeking union with Greece had overthrown the Makarios government in a violent coup Monday and quickly swore in as new president a newspaper publisher named Nicos Sampson. Makarios was reported as dead by Radio Nicosia which was in the hands of the Guard officers.

The revolt of the army officers was led by some 650 Greek army officers brought to the island republic to train the Cypriot National Guard. It was then Archbishop Makarios who had led the long and eventually successful revolt against Greece to establish an independent nation.

The revolt threatened the uneasy peace between Greece and Turkey. Cyprus' population of nearly half a million is four-fifths Greek and one-fifth Turkish. It is a place of often violent rivalries between the two nationalities.

The island has been the scene of almost constant civil war against the Greeks, Turks and British who at various times ruled the native Cypriotes. There are still some 1,600 U. N. peace-keeping forces on Cyprus, although radio reports said those troops are not involved in the current fighting.

The United States Monday urged all nations to avoid interference in the internal affairs of Cyprus, and reported that all American nations on the island were safe. The United States also issued a statement that the massive American 6th Fleet will continue to sail in eastern Mediterranean waters, regardless of the Monday coup.

Immediate concern among diplomats was possible intervention by both Greek and Turkish forces. Greece and Turkey are both members of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance but the two countries have fought over Cyprus for centuries. Both nations have alerted their armies, although there was no indication that troops are moving toward common borders or to Cyprus.

Japanese hijack attempt thwarted

A youth, armed with a knife and claiming to have a bomb, hijacked a Japanese jetliner near Tokyo Monday in an effort to free a leftwing terrorist. He was captured after 75 passengers escaped and police stormed the cockpit. Among the passengers on the airplane was Milton Richmond, 48, of Winston Towers apartments in Chicago.

Former Argentina official killed

Former Argentina Interior Minister Arturo Mor Roig was shot to death Monday in Buenos Aires, bringing the number of political assassinations in the country to 42 within the last 16 months. No motive for the killing was ascertained.

IRA bombs explode in England

Three persons were injured and heavy damage was caused when bombs, apparently planted by the Irish Republican Army, exploded in the British industrial cities of Manchester and Birmingham. In Belfast, the IRA charged that Protestant extremists smuggled poison into the main prison in an attempt to kill members of an outlawed organization detained there.

Israel refuses meeting with Palestine

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday Israel would not negotiate a Middle East settlement with the Palestine Liberation Organization, even if the guerrilla group is included in the Jordanian peace delegation. Instead, he said, the Palestinian problem should be resolved after Israel reaches an accord with the Arab states.

Simon agrees on Egypt's needs

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon met with Egyptian president Anwar Sadat Monday and said the two "agreed 100 per cent" on a general outlook of Egypt's economic needs. Simon and Egyptian officials will sign three agreements today concerning American-Egyptian economic cooperation.

Youth found guilty in killing spree

Elmer Wayne Henley, 19, who confessed to assistance in the murders of six young boys, was found guilty Monday of the killings committed during a three-year spree of sex and torture murders in Houston that claimed 27 lives.

Colson says Nixon knew of break-in Charles Colson said Monday that John D. Ehrlichman told him that President Nixon ordered the operation which led to the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. Colson, who is serving a jail term in connection with the break-in, testified before a closed session of the House Judiciary Committee.

Minor flaws in Kissinger's account

FBI officials testified Monday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that only minor "discrepancies" appeared in Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's account of 1969 wiretaps of newsmen and government officials, said Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark.

Jury selected for Reinecke trial

A six-man, six-woman jury was selected Monday to hear the perjury trial of California's Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke. Reinecke was indicted on two charges by special Watergate prosecutors that he lied to the Senate Judiciary Committee about conversations he had with former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell concerning an offer from ITT to help finance the Republican National Convention in San Diego.

The market

Dow Jones rises, then falls

The stock market closed mixed in slow trading Monday. The Dow Jones industrial average rose more than nine points at the outset, retreated sharply and closed with a loss of 42 at 786.61. The First National Bank of Chicago decided to leave its prime lending rate at the prevailing 12 per cent, although its guideline called for a higher figure.

Strikes: National on, copper off

A midsummer rash of strikes plagues segments of the automotive, construction, mining and airline industries, crippled municipal services in Grand Rapids, Mich., and threatened to spread to more state facilities in Ohio.

It started in Ohio June 6 when prison guards in one institution walked off their jobs. Now, other Ohio state employees seeking a 40-cent an hour raise, voted to "shut down the state of Ohio" in a mid-right strike.

In Naples, Fla., an estimated 1,600 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace workers struck National Airlines, forcing cancellation of all flights through the afternoon and evening. The airline made a last minute offer of a new contract shortly before the strike began just after midnight, and negotiations were continuing. National averages about 20,000 passengers a day and has had a history of short strikes — the last one put employees out of work for only six hours. National canceled all flights through Tuesday morning.

In Baltimore, the 15-day old strike of municipal employees ended with a vote of the workers. The strike began with city refuse collectors and spread through various departments, including the police force.

The Baltimore administration offered the estimated 10,000 striking city employees a $28 a week pay hike which brought all departments except the police force back on the job. City spokesmen said a settlement with the police was very close.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the Kennecott Copper Corp. and striking workers reached a tentative agreement Monday on a contract which virtually guaranteed that one third of the nation's copper workers would return within a week.

A spokesman for the United Steel Workers Union, acting as representative for 26 unions involved in the strike, said the agreement provides for negotiations to continue this final week on local issues. If they are not resolved by Sunday, they would be dropped and workers would report to their jobs.

Details of the tentative settlement were not revealed, but the agreement apparently matched in size and quality the previous agreement reached June 30 with Anaconda Co. in which workers received an hourly increase of 86.4 cents an hour for those now earning $4.50 an hour.

The agreement may end a walkout of some 30,000 copper workers striking four major producers and most of the smaller companies.

The proposed contract would cover nearly 10,000 employees at Kennecott's copper facilities, including 5,000 in Utah, and 1,600 in Hayden, Ariz.

Serious crime soars, up 29% in small U.S. cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Serious crime soared 29 per cent in small U. S. cities and 15 per cent throughout the entire nation during the first three months of 1974, the FBI said Monday.

Statistics compiled by local, county and state law enforcement agencies and released by FBI Director Clarence W. Kelley also reported major crime increases in suburban and rural areas. Regionally the biggest increase was in the South.

Convicts driven back by police, tear gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The two convicts holed up in the basement of the federal courthouse sought to escape Monday night but were driven back by police using tear gas after shots were exchanged, ing tear gas after shots were exchanged, spokesman.

John K. Russell, the spokesman, said Frank Gorham and Robert Jones, the convicts, used an axe to break into an air duct and escape the basement cellblock where they had held hostages between Thursday and Sunday.

"There was an exchange of gunfire," Russell said. "Tear gas was used. Nobody has been injured."

Russell said "the prisoners are alive," and an unidentified person, not one of the prisoners, has been arrested. He said Gorham and Jones were back in the basement lockup and were talking with U.S. marshals.

The generally grim statistics showed a crime level 18 per cent higher than the same period in 1973.

"These statistics provide no clues as to what is causing the upsurge in crime, other than in what areas of the country the increases are occurring," Attorney General William French Smith said in a statement accompanying the report.

"This means that all of us in law enforcement, as well as the public, must take a hard look at the situation and work together to halt this trend."

The Uniform Crime Report divides serious crime in two categories: violent crime — murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault — and property crime, which includes burglary, larceny and auto theft.

Violent crimes increased 4 per cent nationwide, a relatively bright spot in the report compared with the 6 per cent rise in crimes of violence registered in the first three months of 1973.

Crime in middle-sized cities jumped 10 per cent compared to the 29 per cent climb in cities with under 10,000 people, the report showed. There was a 22 per cent increase in suburban crime and an 18 per cent rise of crime in rural areas.

Regionally the crime level climbed 23 per cent in the South, 17 per cent in the West, and 9 per cent in the North and North Central states.

Crimes against people rose an average 4 per cent for the period. Forcible rape was up 10 per cent, aggravated assault and murder rose 7 per cent each, and robbery was up 1 per cent. Crimes against property soared 16 per cent, compared to a 2 per cent decrease reported in the first quarter of 1973.

Three test-tube babies born, now 18-months old and normal

HULL, England (UPI) — A British gynecologist disclosed Monday that the world's first test tube babies were born in Europe in the past 18 months and that all are still alive and appear to be normal.

Dr. Douglas Bevis, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Leeds University, told a British Medical Association conference that three test tube babies had been born — one in Britain and two on the Continent.

Bevis refused to disclose the identities of the doctors involved or of the babies or their precise whereabouts. But he said centers in Leeds, Cambridge, London and Birmingham were at work on the technique.

Bevis said the technique involved taking the eggs from a woman, placing them in a nutrient solution with sperm for 7 to 10 days to become fertilized and then returning them to the womb.

He said the technique is used on women who cannot have children normally because the fallopian tubes that lead from the ovaries to the womb are blocked.

Bevis said there had been no great breakthrough in technique to make the fertilizations possible.

"It is a matter of luck," he said. "So many have been attempted that by the law of averages some have come through."

Bevis said he expected more babies to be born in this way "but it will be a trickle, not a flood. We still do not understand what we have to do to the womb to make this work."

(Caroline) Wallner of Arlington Heights, and two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Vinger of Elmhurst and Mrs. Florence (Jack) Hildebrand of Oak Park.

Voting machine 'specs' rigged: bidder

Bid specifications for 400 county voting machines were rigged to favor new owners of the controversial former Shoup Voting Machine Corp. of Pennsylvania, the former president of the company charged Monday.

Bidding of the machines by county officials "is very, very confusing," Ransom F. Shoup II said as the county board failed to award a contract for purchase of the machines. Shoup's new firm, R. F. Shoup Corp., competes with the successor to his former company.

Delay in awarding the purchase contract for the 400 machines could leave the county short of state-required machines in the November election. State law requires one voting machine per precinct and more than 200 precincts have been created since the March primary election, county officials said.

Shoup said R. F. Shoup Corp. expects certification today to sell machines in Illinois. "I can't say we were closed out" in bidding "because we aren't certified yet," he said after Monday's county board meeting.

The board refused to purchase bonds for financing of the machines when the low bid, by Harris Trust and Savings Bank, was a net interest of 6.1983 per cent. Interest cost on the estimated $1 million in bonds was $347,093.

AFTER COUNTY officials found budget funds to purchase the machines without bonds, the board was forced to delay awarding of the contract because a quorum of board members was lacking.

Low, and only, bidder for the 400 voting machines was International Election Systems Corp. (IES), a successor to Shoup's former company. The firm bid $880,000 or $2,200 per machine.

A $998,000 bid by Automatic Voting Machine Division (AVM) was ruled ineligible because the machines do not meet county specifications and Shoup's firm was listed as "no bid."

Lola Flamm, Republican Party candidate for county clerk, has called an 11 a.m. press conference today to charge that county officials rigged the vote machine bids.

Shoup said that the price of his voting machine is $1,800, about $400 less than the IES price or $160,000 less than the AVM bid.

AVM ALSO manufactures machines that comply with county requirements, Shoup said. "The specifications were written here so only International could bid."

Marion P. Gemmill

Mrs. Marion P. Gemmill, 83, nee Perkins, of Mount Prospect, died Sunday in Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines.

Visitation is today from 3 to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, where funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday. The Rev. Edwin Ira Stevens of Arlington Heights will officiate. Burial will be in Rosehill Cemetery, Chicago.

Mrs. Gemmill was born in Milwaukee, June 20, 1891. She was preceded in death by her husband, Glen.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Frances (Peter) Tsolinas of Mount Prospect; two grandchildren, Michael and Christopher, and a brother, Lewis Perkins of Colorado.

Nicholas Hummel

Funeral service for Nicholas Hummel, 82, of Niles, is today at 11 a.m. in Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Officiating will be the Rev. Robert S. McDonald of St. John United Church of Christ, Arlington Heights. Burial will be in Ridgewood Cemetery, Des Plaines.

A retired residential janitor, Mr. Hummel was born in Romania, July 12, 1892. He died Sunday in Chateau Nursing Home, Northbrook.

Surviving are his widow, Anna; four daughters, Mrs. Helen (Ed) Thien of Chicago, Mrs. Anna (Michael) Hasselberger, Mrs. Evaline (Anthony) Lukhaub and Mrs. Betty (Frank) Nicolas; two sons, Robert N. and daughter-in-law, Anna of Wheeling and Matt and daughter-in-law, Mary Ann Hummel; six grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Barbara Sieburg of Arlington Heights. He was preceded in death by a sister, Mrs. Betty Thompson.

Contractors start trying to salvage building season

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 179, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; 673, Wheaton; 705, Maywood; and 786, Chicago.

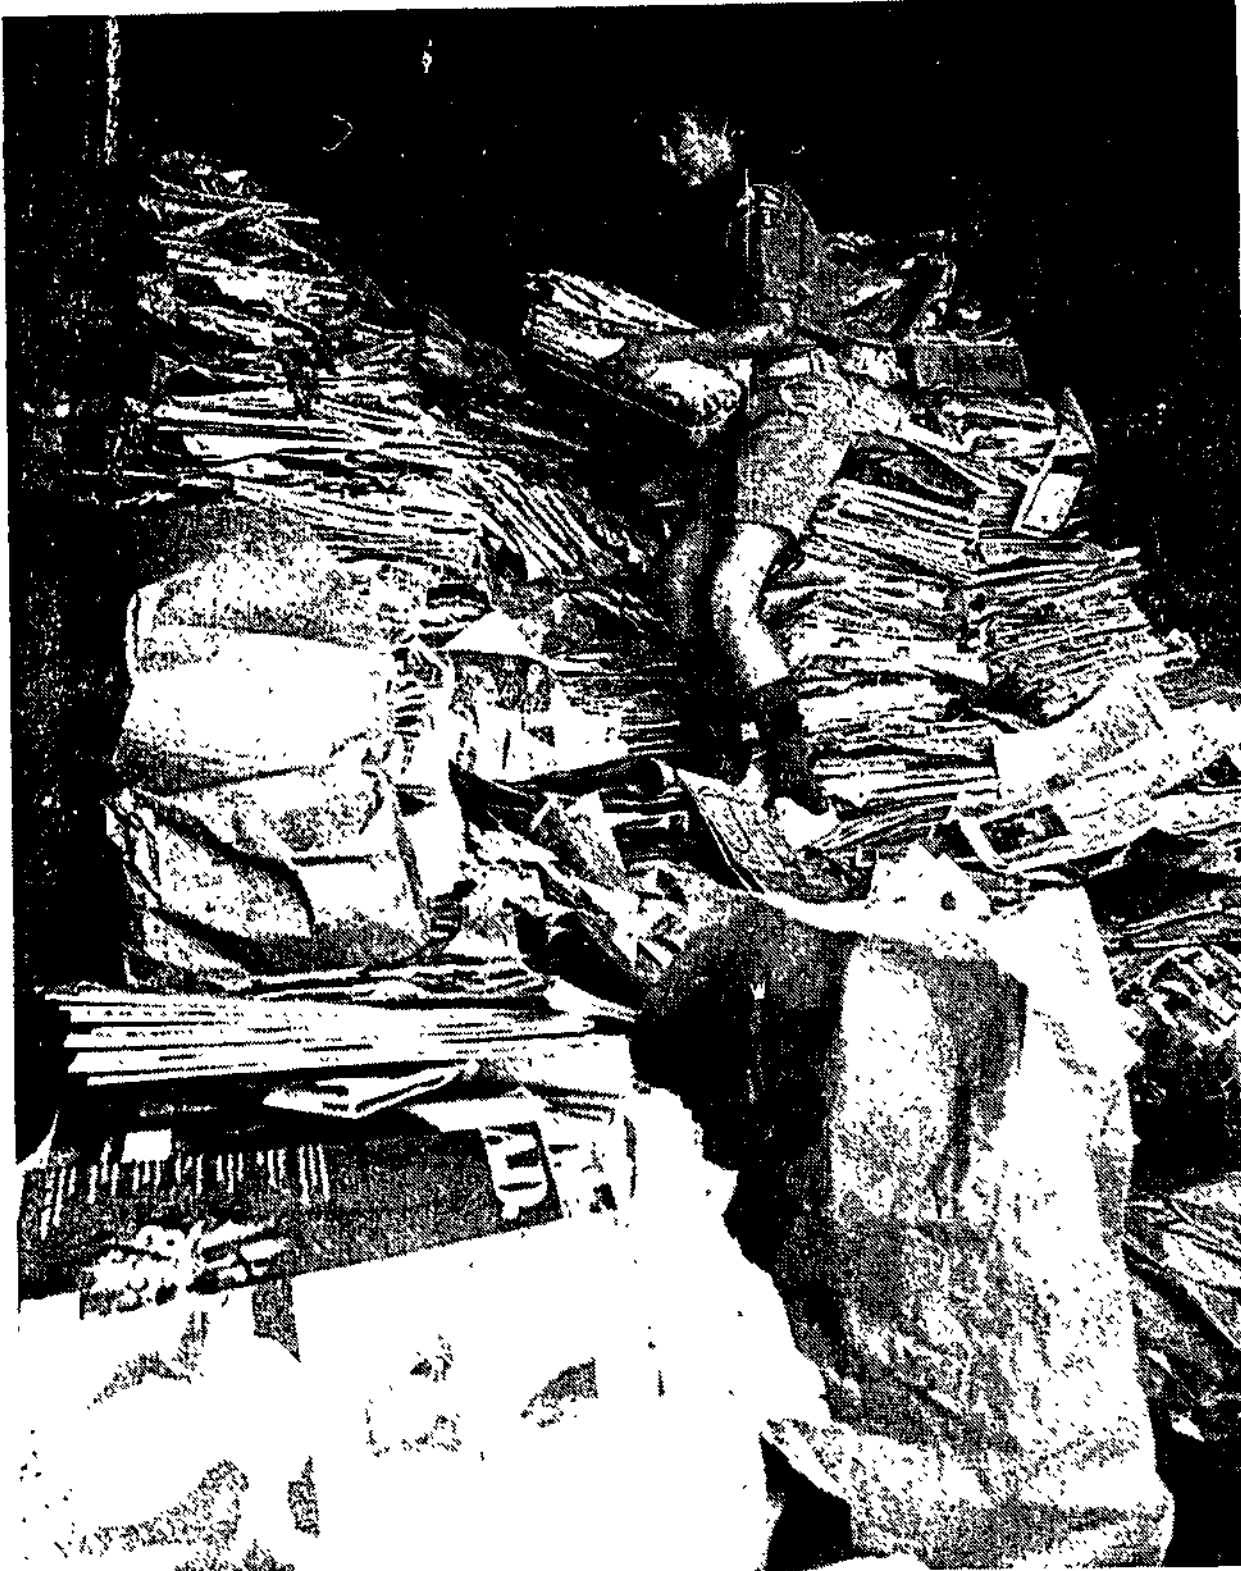

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

PILING IT ON is what Des Plaines Scouts like Bob Stevens of Troop 13 and other youngsters did last week while working at the city's recycling center. The Scouts are now supervising the operation of the center under an experimental program that was started two weeks ago. The center, located on Oakton Street west of Lee Street, is now open only on Wednesday afternoon and Saturday and Sunday.

and half-time teacher for Gemini Junior High School, a reading coordinator for Gemini and two district resource teachers.

THE BOARD IS also scheduled to approve the addition of 20 classified personnel including nine learning disabilities aides, two physical education aides for Anolis, six special education aides and a junior high learning disabilities aide.

A tentative agreement between the board and Dist. 63 teachers' union on a local union prohibition of teachers from wearing union buttons — originally scheduled to be announced at tonight's meeting — may not be presented, according to Mrs. Nidetz.

"Things haven't jelled — I really don't know whether we will have a statement ready or not," she said.

Mrs. Nidetz said a joint statement would probably be released by the end of the week.

Man killed, woman hurt in auto crash

A 63-year-old Chicago man was killed and another woman was injured when their two autos collided late Sunday on River Road near Gregory Street.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital was Johann Lammersfeld, 4832 Troy. Another motorist, Diane Zimkowski, 30, of 24W541 Lake St., Roselle, was taken to Holy Family with a fractured left ankle. She was listed in good condition.

According to police reports, Lammersfeld was traveling southbound on River Road about 7:20 p.m. when he apparently lost control of his car, a 1973 Chevrolet, and crossed into the opposite lanes.

Police said Lammersfeld's car swerved and was struck on the right side by the auto driven by the Zimkowski woman.

Lammersfeld was pinned inside his auto and it took several minutes to remove him.

Patrolman Gregory Halvorsen said the length of the marks left by Lammersfeld's auto indicated he may have been driving at a high rate of speed.

Funeral arrangements for Lammersfeld were pending.

Young appoints 2 to campaign posts

With the summer weather starting to heat up, campaign activities in the 10th District Congressional race also are beginning to warm up considerably.

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, has announced the appointment of two more supporters to key campaign positions.

Frank W. Considine has been named chairman of the executive committee of the "Young for Congress in 1974" campaign.

The congressman also has tabbed former WBBM-TV political editor Joe Mathewson as public relations director for the campaign.

Considine is a director of a number of civic and business organizations in the Chicago area.

Mathewson also was a press secretary for former Illinois Gov. Richard Ogilvie and is studying law at the University of Chicago.

Both are residents of Winnetka.

Mikva raps foreign policy

In a series of prepared statements released in recent days, 19th District Congressional candidate Abner J. Mikva has criticized a number of American foreign policy actions.

Mikva called for a suspension of foreign aid to Turkey until that country reverses its decision to allow farmers there to begin growing poppies again.

Turkey authorities allowed the farmers to grow poppies despite a guarantee by the U.S. to pay the country more than $35 million in economic aid. The poppies have been described as a major source of raw opium and figure as a source of the heroin sold in this country.

"Turkey's decision to resume poppy growing this fall is a direct attack on the youth of our country and a cynical rejection of an agreement on which Turkey has already collected $13.6 million," Mikva said.

The former congressman who is seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, also was critical of the decision to give nuclear material to Middle East nations.

He termed the move irresponsible and urged passage of legislation introduced in Congress to require Congressional approval of such an action.

"Despite assurances that the reactors will only be used for peaceful purposes, the fact remains that plutonium is a reactor waste product. No matter what happens, what safeguards are installed, there's no guarantee this could be prevented in the Middle East," Mikva said.

He also noted the nuclear material could lead to the creation of nuclear weapons which are vulnerable to terrorists.

Young opens Kenilworth office

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young has opened a new neighborhood campaign office in Kenilworth at 600 Green Day Rd.

The new office was put into operation Monday with a coffee headed by office co-chairwomen Loretta Prim, Glenview and Marion Bowles, Kenilworth.

Danille Young, the congressman's wife was also on hand for the festivities.

"The opening of neighborhood headquarters is part of an effort to make better use of the talents of persons in various areas," said Cicely Maton, Young's campaign manager.

Young also plans to open campaign offices in the near future in Des Plaines and Park Ridge.

Would-be robber gets wrong number, no cash

A would-be robber, who on the telephone thought he was in the process of threatening a Des Plaines store clerk into giving him money, dialed a wrong number and ended up with a Mount Prospect store, police said Friday.

The caller reportedly told the girl at a photography store at 1858 Algonquin Rd., in Mount Prospect that a man was pointing a rifle at her head from an adjacent Jewel Food store about 6:50 p.m. Thursday evening.

The man, described as sounding about 20 to 25 years old instructed her to put cash register money in an envelope and drop it behind the store.

According to reports however, no Jewel is located near the store. The girl called police, remembering that a Jewel is next to the Wishing Well Photomat, in the Dempster Street and Elmhurst Road shopping center in Des Plaines.

Police from Des Plaines and Mount Prospect plus Cook County Sheriff's Police and Illinois State Police answered the call at the Wishing Well but a clerk there told police she had received no phone call and knew nothing of any robbery attempt.

Nothing was found during a search of the Jewel store roof.

About two months ago, Rolling Meadows Police reported a similar extortion at Reichardt Cleaners, 2204 Algonquin Pkwy. that netted an undetermined amount of cash.

According to reports, a caller made a similar threat to an employee of the store who left the money in a designated area and a man on a motorcycle drove off with the cash.

Two charged with theft from Des Plaines pharmacy

Des Plaines Police arrested two men and said they stole $1,372 from a local pharmacy.

Physical fitness week opens in two parks

This is physical fitness week at two Des Plaines parks. A different activity is planned for each day.

The program at Orchard Place playground led off with a fitness poster contest and peanut hunt. The Orchard Place Olympics and making of fitness charts will be held today. Wednesday, the playground activities will include a potato-mime contest and making a checker board. Thursday will be relay race day and Friday will feature a bike hike. A permission slip will be necessary for children participating in the bike hike.

The drama theme for the week is pantomime. A different topic will be acted out each day. Arts and crafts will make bean designs and posters.

Hiking will be the main activity in the fitness program this week at West Park, with a three-mile hike Wednesday and five-mile hike on Friday. Wednesday's activities will include running races and exercises, and Thursday is the mini-Olympics day.

Children of all ages are invited to join in the daily playground activities.

The two, identified as William Arterburn, 37, of 4325 25th St., Schiller Park, and John Sellinger, 40, of 2453 N. Kostner, Chicago, were arrested near Center and Oakton streets late Sunday afternoon.

Police said they stole the money from the Des Plaines Pharmacy, 1188 Lee St.

A druggist told police he was away from the store's cash register when he heard it being opened and shut. He saw two men running from the store and called police, giving them a description of the men and their auto.

Police said they spotted the car a short time later and Arterburn and Sellinger were identified by the pharmacist as the thieves.

Found in the auto was part of the money and a large quantity of the store's merchandise in shopping bags on the rear seat, according to reports.

Lt. Lee Alfano said it was later learned the two have extensive arrest records, mostly on theft and narcotics charges, including arrests in Iowa, Michigan and Arizona. Alfano also said he arrested Sellinger here about 10 years ago on a theft charge.

Both men posted $10,000 bond and were released. They will appear Aug. 8 in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

Storm debris may remain for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchhoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS said a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the Arlington Market, Kensington Road and Dryden Place, lost its power until approximately 7 p.m.

Stephens said nearly 700 persons were affected by blackouts near Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street, and Lincoln and Busse Road in Mount Prospect.

"The big problem was trees," Stephens said. "We had branches on wires. We couldn't do much until the trees were cleared, and trying to get tree contractors on a Sunday is another matter."

He said both independent contractors and Edison employees removed fallen branches from the wires.

STEPHENS ALSO said towns outside of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, and Palatine also had power interruptions, which he described as "simpler in nature and pretty well scattered."

He said the company received more than 1,000 calls during the course of the blackouts, and sent out 30 crews to make repairs.

He said the company called in crews from Northbrook and Waukegan to assist.

Winds cause $7,000 damage when sign falls

Des Plaines was relatively lucky in the wake of Sunday's short-but-not-so-sweet rainstorm compared to some other Northwest suburban communities. But one incident caused nearly $7,000 damage.

According to Fire Dept. reports, the damage was caused when an electric sign fell from being whipped by winds of up to 70 miles per hour, at the All-Star Car Wash, Algonquin and Elmhurst roads.

The bulk of the damage was resulted when the sign fell on some gas pumps.

There were no reported injuries, according to fire department reports.

Another $700 damage was caused to the home of Edward Leuthner, 1113 Hewitt Dr., when a lightning bolt struck a television antenna on top of his house and about 2 p.m. apparently blew out the picture tube on his set.

Damage was estimated to be about $700.

Time to be thinking of wedding belles

Pamela Schenk

Jean Erbstoesser

Wendy Simmons

Carol Deiter

Kathryn Van Driel

Deborah Cochenour

A Nov. 9 wedding is planned by Pamela Margaret Schenk, daughter of the Richard Schenks of Hoffman Estates, and Robert F. Maldel, son of the Robert Maldels of Newark, Ohio.

The bride-to-be graduated in 1972 from Conant High School and works for Misco-Shawnee, Inc., in Elk Grove.

Her fiancé is employed at Kemper Insurance Co., Long Grove. He is a graduate of Humboldt Institute in Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Erbstoesser of Rolling Meadows announce their daughter Jean's engagement to Angelo Demonte of Chicago. The couple will be married Dec. 7 in Kingdom Hall, Palatine.

Jean's fiancé, son of Nick Demonte of Italy, is employed at the House of Duro in Chicago.

She works for Motorola in Schaumburg.

The engagement of Wendy Lee Simmons to David F. Adkins, son of Mrs. Janet Adkins of Dayton, Ohio, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Simmons of 1307 Santee Ln., Mount Prospect.

Their wedding is planned for Sept. 14.

A graduate of Michigan State University, Wendy does substitute teaching at Fenton High School and is a recreation instructor for River Trails Park District. Her fiancé is a U.S. deputy marshal in Des Moines, Iowa.

Planning a Jan. 18 wedding in Kirkland Chapel on the campus of the University of Tulsa are Carol Deiter of Redfield, S.D., and Gary Theilgaard of 507 S. William St., Mount Prospect.

The couple's engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Deiter. Gary's parents are the Harvey L. Theilgaards.

Carol graduated in June from the University of Tulsa with a degree in nursing and is now at Doctors Hospital as a staff nurse. Gary will graduate next June, but is currently working for Alcoa Co.

An announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Van Driel, 312 S. Wille St., Mount Prospect, tells of the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn M., to Raymond L. Nee, also of Mount Prospect, but no wedding date has been set.

Raymond, son of the Edgar L. Nees, 451 S. Elmhurst Ave., is in the Navy aboard the USS Lawrence and about to start on a five-month cruise to South America.

Both he and Kathryn are graduates of Prospect High School, she in the class of '74 and he in '73. The bride-to-be is employed at Allstate Insurance Co., Northbrook.

Deborah Ruth Cochenour's engagement to John R. Beyer of Chicago is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Cochenour, 3401 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows. The wedding is set for Nov. 10.

Deborah just graduated from Rolling Meadows High School, and her fiancé recently completed an apprenticeship with the Chicago Sun-Times and Daily News.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Beyer of Chicago.

"CHRISTMAS IN JULY" preparations are being made by Des Plaines Job's Daughters of Bethel 105. Karen Kuchel and Connie Huffaker show handmade boutique items to be sold along with baked goods from Mrs.

Claus' Kitchen. A visit from Santa Claus with free gifts for youngsters highlights the sale Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, Prairie and Graceland, Des Plaines. The public is invited.

Daytona Beach honeymoon for Des Plaines newlyweds

Daytona Beach was the honeymoon destination of Laurie McMin, daughter of the John McMinas of Des Plaines, and Scott Klose, son of the Richard Kloses, also of Des Plaines.

The couple was married June 22 in the First United Methodist Church during an afternoon candlelight ceremony. The bride appeared in an ivory organza gown with lace bodice and embroidered sleeves, gathered in the back into a cathedral train. Her 3-tiered veil was attached to a matching headpiece, and she carried French carnations, roses, baby's breath and stephanotis.

Sue McMin was her sister's maid of honor, while sister Pat was a bridesmaid. Also attending the bride were Betty Baldo of Des Plaines and Nancy Eckert of Oak Lawn.

THEY WORE aqua and white halter dresses with jackets and carried aqua

French carnations, white roses and baby's breath.

Best man was Mark Kuzich, and groomsmen were Joe Jung and Steve Miller of Des Plaines and the groom's brother Pete of Arizona. Another brother, Richard, of Jacksonville, Fla., was an usher.

All four grandmothers attended the wedding as well as a number of out-of-town guests from Louisiana, Arizona, Florida and Pennsylvania.

A dinner reception followed at the Casa Royale. The couple now resides in Des Plaines.

The bride is a graduate of Maine West High School and Western Illinois University. She is employed as a substitute teacher. The groom, also a Maine West grad, received a degree in political science from Northeastern Illinois University.

Bride wears heirloom ring

Mr. and Mrs. David Schlesselman

Gaye Geren wore her great-grandmother's ruby engagement ring when she wed David Schlesselman June 22 in St. Paul Lutheran Church, Concordia, Mo. the groom's hometown. The couple composed their own wedding service.

Gaye is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Geren, 41 E. Fremont, Des Plaines. David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Schlesselman of Concordia.

The bride chose a gown of sheer nylon over silk organza with daisy lace trim. Her fingertip veil was attached to a headpiece of daisy lace with seed pearls and rhinestones, and she carried daisy poms, pink roses, and purple statice.

Matron of honor was Ann Bergman of Collinsville, Ill., and bridesmaids were sisters of the groom, Joyce and Kathy, and Janice Rutledge of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The attendants were attired in princess-style gowns in a rainbow of colors:

A gathering of mothers and babes

by KAREN THOMPSON

"We welcome you, baby on one shoulder and name tag on the other," read the lead page in the schedule book for the fifth international convention of the La Leche League held last week at the Palmer House in Chicago.

It was hardly what could be called the usual convention when almost half of the attendance was made up of babies. But what an advertisement for baby backpacks and crackers — and a special thanks to Kimbles for the donation of 19,000 disposable diapers for the baby delegates.

Entitled "Human Milk: A Unique Gift of Love; A Natural World Resource," the convention was attended by members from more than 33 countries with the purpose of "hastening the day when every mother can be assured of receiving whatever help she may need to succeed in the womanly art of breastfeeding." Appropriately it was held in Chicago where La Leche League had its beginning in 1956.

PEERING INTO THE grand ballroom was like looking into a giant nursery. Conventioneers were warned not to flush diapers down the toilet. There were babies nursing, babies crawling up the aisles toward the speaker's platform, babies asleep in slings slung over their mothers' shoulders.

Accompanied by baby talk and crying, Dr. Derrick B. Jelliffe, professor of public health and pediatrics and head of the Population, Family and International Health Division at U.C.L.A., presented the keynote address.

A pediatric nutritionist, Dr. Jelliffe and his wife have spent most of their professional lives in developing countries such as the Caribbean, Asia and Africa. Jelliffe sees mother's milk as a "natural world resource" with great economic implications, especially in the poor countries of the world, where breastfeeding is on the decline.

"It has been calculated that to supply cow's milk formula for all women with young babies in India would require the immediate development of an additional herd of 114,000,000 lactating cows," Jelliffe said.

"TO BE ABLE to bottle feed a three-month-old baby adequately in Kampala, Uganda, a few years ago, it was figured that about one-third of the total salary of a basic laborer would be needed," he added.

On a more local scene, Jelliffe said the price of dried skim milk — the basic ingredient of most formulas — has quadrupled since 1969.

He stressed that there has been inadequate appreciation that the decline in breastfeeding is not only a loss financially but nutritionally as far as the child is concerned.

ACCORDING TO research reports, there is evidence that human milk contains specific immunizing factors to various diseases. Nursing babies show a higher resistance to intestinal disorders and respiratory problems.

"Chances of infantile obesity, caused by calorie overdosage in the first years of life, can also be reduced by breastfeeding," said Dr. Jelliffe.

In conclusion, the nutritionist explained that there are vast differences between a mother's milk and baby formulas. "Milk of each mammal species are highly complex and very different mixtures of many ingredients, nutrients and substances. Each has been developed over hundreds of thousands of years for specific purposes and very different needs in diverse species of mammals," Jelliffe said.

Several of the main speakers for the 126-session convention gathered for breakfast to survey the problems of breastfeeding in the U. S. and foreign countries and the work of the La Leche League to combat the difficulties.

RECENTLY RETURNED from the West Indies, Mrs. Derrick Jelliffe portrayed the problems there that are typical in most underdeveloped countries. "We are trying to reverse the incidence of malnutrition in the early years. How can a family afford to bottle-feed a baby when they only have $5 a week to raise the whole family?"

She expressed dismay with medical personnel in those countries who are "not trained in, or ignore the importance of breastfeeding to these people. There is a slow revolution starting in the U. S., however, and other countries will follow that example," she said optimistically.

Skip Rapp is the La Leche League's leader lady working in Brazil. She translates and adapts the league's literature, sets up information centers and makes contacts with doctors and health organizations.

"We need to push our teaching on to those who really need it to survive — the impoverished," she said. To do this she has suggested mid-wife circuit riders in Brazil who will teach and spread the word of breastfeeding there.

AMONG THE OTHER nearly 300 noted speakers attending the breakfast were Sheila Kitzinger, social anthropologist and childbirth educator from England; Niles Newton, a behavioral scientist and professor of psychology at Northwestern University School of Medicine; Karen Pryor, author of "Nursing Your Baby" and drama critic for the Honolulu Advertiser; Dana Raphael of Westport, Conn., and author of "The Tender Gift: Breastfeeding;" Maria Piers, dean of the Erikson Institute for Early Education in Chicago, and author of "Growing Up With Children and Others."

Susan Saint James, star of screen and television's "McMillan and Wife," was guest speaker for the convention banquet. She is a member of the La Leche League and received national attention when she had it written into her contract that she could bring her infant daughter, Sunshine, to the studio so that she could be breast fed.

Cathy Kapica marries medical student

Cathy Marie Kapica became the bride of medical student Donald Lynn Cyborski June 22 in an 11 a.m. ceremony in Our Lady of the Wayside Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kapica of Arlington Heights, and her groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cyborski of Rockford.

The couple met at Loyola University, where the bride was graduated cum laude in biology this spring, and the groom was graduated, also in biology, two years ago. He now attends the University of Illinois Medical School.

For the nuptial mass the bride made her gown of bonded lace with sheer nylon sleeves and overskirt, adorned with nearly 1,000 hand-stitched seed pearls. She wore her mother's headpiece with a floor-length veil, and she carried white roses and baby's breath.

THE BRIDE'S SISTER, Sandra, was her maid of honor, and bridesmaids were the groom's two sisters Mary Jo and Marilyn, and his 13-year-old sister Sharon, a junior bridesmaid. They wore pink voile gowns trimmed with ruffles. Pink picture hats and bouquets of pink elegance-carnations, pink daisies and rose straw flowers completed their ensembles.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cyborski

The groom chose his brother, Greg of Dubuque as best man, and the bride's brother, John, as an usher. Completing the wedding party was Jim Benka of Chicago.

A reception was held at the White Eagle in Niles, after which the couple left for a brief honeymoon in Wisconsin. They are now at home in Cicero.

The bride, a graduate of Arlington High School, is working for Tom Mills brokerage firm in Chicago until fall, when she plans to attend graduate school.

Next on the agenda

ARLINGTON LA LECHE

"The Baby Arrives: The Baby in Relation to the Family" will be the topic of discussion at the Arlington Heights La Leche League's third meeting in its series set for 8 o'clock this evening.

Anyone interested in breastfeeding is welcome, babies included.

The meeting will be led by Mrs. Frank Tyska, who may be called at 392-3841 for further information. Hostess will be Mrs. Steven Braun, 1824 N. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights.

La Leche League promotes breast feeding. There are monthly sessions on various phases which involve both the parents and their babies, and lending library is always available with books on all aspects of parenting, childbirth, breastfeeding, nutrition and related subjects. Group leaders are always available for counseling.

Heavily stained plastic dishes difficult to clean

Dear Dorothy: What can I use to clean melamine dishes? It may be years of use, but I find cleanser takes off only a little of the stain. Also, how do you get stains off stainless flatware?

—Jan Wightman

Second question first: I've tried them all and have never found anything to take stains off stainless flatware. As to Melamine dinnerware, if yours are dishwasher-proof, they can be washed with safety in the washer, taking the precaution to put them on the top rack away from the heating element.

As a rule, once plastic dishes get heavily stained there isn't much that can be done, although readers have sent in hints over the years. One recommended soaking in a mild sodium perborate solution; one used regular silver polish; one a paste of baking soda and water, and another a paste of plain salt and water. Don't forget the regular Melamine cleanser.

Dear Dorothy: This may be an old wives' tale, but I've heard that people who seem to attract insects should be careful when picnicking to not wear perfume, hair dressings, dark clothes and use antiperspirants if they perspire heavily.

—Andrea Winters

by Dorothy Ritz

There's hard common sense in this tip and may be worth following by those who consider themselves allergic to insect bites. In fact, if anyone in a family is sensitive to bites, it's wise to check the doctor and get an antidote to carry. For some people, insect bites can be terribly serious.

Dear Dorothy: Best way to get the last of dressing out of the bottle is to turn the bottle on its cap overnight. All the remaining dressing will flow into the neck. This is also good for make-up and lotions. I never waste a drop.

—Diana Fenton

Obesity worsens high blood pressure

My husband has high blood pressure which is inherited. Everyone in his family has it. My problem is, he goes to a doctor who doesn't weigh him or put him on any kind of a diet. He has been going to him for the past 15 years and keeps putting on weight. He's five-foot-nine and weighs about 260.

He has a lot of indigestion and keeps chewing pills for gas. He fries his eggs in a pan of oil. He can't drink coffee, tea or Sanka because they all bother him, and now he's on cocoa because so far this hasn't bothered him. I told him cocoa isn't good for him.

I am very patient with him. We've been married 28 years and have had a happy life, but I worry about what he's doing to himself. I keep asking him to change doctors and he won't. Shouldn't he be going to a specialist? I'm sure he might live longer than me, but I would like you to tell me if I'm wrong in worrying. He's been on pressure medication all these years.

Obesity is harmful to patients with high blood pressure. Even if it is inherited it still needs to be treated. You don't neglect to treat diabetes just because you have inherited it. The same applies to high blood pressure.

The evidence strongly suggests that about half of the cases of moderately elevated blood pressure can be controlled adequately with proper weight control. That means getting rid of all the fat. Some doctors give up, knowing a patient will not follow a diet and will continue to fry eggs swimming in oil and ignore every bit of diet advice given. So, the doctor does what he can with a patient who won't cooperate, and uses medicine to help relieve the problem.

Personally, I think all moderate cases of high blood pressure should first be treated by eliminating any excess fat the patient has. If the high blood pressure persists then it is time to use medicines.

A lot of your husband's indigestion may be related to his bad dietary program. Overeating leads to "gas" and indigestion. And, it is true that cocoa contains caffeine which may not be good for

by Dr. Lawrence E. Lamb

the indigestion problem. It also contains plenty of calories.

It does sound like your husband needs help in the diet department. Can't you do it for him? One sure way to avoid those eggs swimming in oil would be for you to fix his breakfast for him. Give him a low-fat, low-cholesterol breakfast to start the day with. Then plan the rest of his meals so that they are satisfying but not loaded with calories. The wife often makes the difference in whether a husband is successful on a diet.

You didn't say what your husband's blood pressure is with his present treatment plan. If it is well controlled then his remaining problem is that diet which you could help with. He could ask his doctor to refer him to a heart specialist. After he has had the benefit of the specialist's advice he could return to his family doctor if he wished and all the recommendations of the specialist would be given to the referring family doctor.

MONEY TALKS

Passbook savings hold their own against other investments

By Donald F. Morton, President
Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

The cover story in a recent issue of Forbes carried the inviting title, "Inflation: How to Protect Your Capital". After reviewing the various opportunities for investment, the article concluded, "It hurts us to say it, but there is almost no place for the average capitalist to hide from today's two-digit inflation."

The article compared the relative earnings of a person in the 50 per cent income bracket who invested $100,000 in 1973 in various financial enterprises. Discounting profits eroded by a 1973 inflation rate of 8.8 per cent, the article concluded that this person's $100,000 had shrunk as follows in these investments during 1973:

Three-month CDs ($99,300), six-month Treasury bills ($98,400), tax-exempt municipal bonds ($96,300), ordinary passbook accounts ($94,700), one-year CDs ($94,600), corporate bonds ($93,300), long-time Treasury bonds ($87,700), common stocks ($80,400), and utility stocks ($77,500).

A pencil-sharp reader disputed Forbes' arithmetic by noting that the returns credited to the three-month CDs and six-month Treasury bills overlooked the 50 per cent tax on their incomes and that their figures should be $95,600 and $95,200, respectively.

Aside from demonstrating the erosive effect of inflation on people's life savings, the article makes the ordinary passbook account a respectable performer among more sophisticated competitors. A decided plus for the savings account is its complete safety: "better a lingering case of inflation shrinkage than sudden death," says Forbes.

FLORIDA'S KEY WEST sports a contagious air of relaxation that makes Pelican Path tour followers relish the quiet moments and refreshments found in the quaint arcades tucked throughout the Old Island City.

Key West - at the end of a rainbow

by SUSIE COUVILLON

Waters shimmer. Gulls cry. And a solitary road plays leap-frog down the 29-island stretch of the Florida Keys.

The island-hopping game skids to a halt some 100 miles southwest of mainland Florida, on Key West. Both an island and a city. In fact, the city, perched on its secluded island namesake, is the southernmost in the continental United States.

The superlatives and glowing phrases about Key West have all been used, but most have weathered well.

Key West is indeed a journey's end, or as native islanders put it, the end of the rainbow. Others have likened the city to a Yankee seaport, somehow carried to the tropics by balmy trade winds and successfully transplanted. Most visitors agree it's all of these together, and more. For it is also a way of life, a lifestyle that reveals both in its solitude and down-beat pace.

But not always so tame, oldtimers are quick to add. Yet even their memories can't stretch back to the days before 1822 when Key West, the troublesome and rowdy rag-tag end of Florida, was made a U.S. territory.

Before acquiring its territorial respectability, Key West was a favorite stomping ground for pirates, wreckers, rum-runners, smugglers and other high-stepping characters. The transient ruffians gave the area its first swashbuckling splash of notoriety, now mellowed to a more demure legendary status.

THEN CAME Bahamian sponge divers, Cuban cigarmakers and Yankee seafarers. Key West's early settlers who set up housekeeping in the 1820s. Their marks are still firmly etched throughout the Old Island City, the affectionate pen name for Key West.

Island-born people sprung from many Key West generations of primarily Bahamian heritage are nicknamed "conchs." Their namesake is the marine creature valued by these islanders for its shell and succulent meat.

The strong Cuban influence is tasted in small cafes in the old part of town where the fare is black beans and yellow rice, conch chowder and fritters, picadillo and arroz con pollo.

Yankee seafarer memories are brought back by the 19th-century sea captains' houses, whose sturdy white frames peek out from behind tangled tropical foliage. A strange incongruity, and yet basic to Key West's charm.

The Key West of today is not the sort of place for a hurry, scurry tour. It should be savored.

The self-guided Pelican Path tour, sponsored by the Old Island Restoration Foundation, provides the ideal opportunity for exploring at a leisurely pace while strolling, bicycling or motoring through the Old Island City. Here's a chance to be enveloped by the city's mysterious charisma.

Pelican Path signs begin at Mallory Square and mark a winding course through the city. A course that passes nearly 40 points of historical or architectural interest.

BUT A STONE'S throw from Mallory Square is the Audubon House where former owner Capt. John H. Geiger hosted James Audubon in 1832. And it was here that the great ornithologist painted the birds of the Keys. The house is open to visitors as a museum.

Just a few blocks down the same street is the Hemingway House in which author Ernest Hemingway penned several works, including "To Have and Have Not" and "The Snows of Kilimanjaro."

On the other side of Mallory Square, the pedestrian stumbles upon Key West Hand Print Fabrics. Its sedate white waterfront building seems out of step with the riot of colors and patterns within.

Watching fabrics being hand-printed by silk screen process in designs flavored by the Keys holds a special fascination for visitors of all ages. Yard goods and finished garments may be purchased.

TRAVEL SCHOOL
The travel industry all over the country has one tremendous problem — finding trained personnel to handle the mushrooming pleasure and business travel. Almost daily someone is asking how to get into this fascinating business. Unfortunately, travel agencies cannot possibly take the time to train new personnel during office hours.

Please note the ad today on our travel school beginning September 17. Our pledge to you is that, when the course is completed, you will have the necessary skills to take a position in the travel field.

We will not waste your time with office procedures such as accounting, because every office has its own system. But, you will have an excellent basic course, with individual classroom assistance, taught by a former school teacher and supplemented with professional industry personnel. Class size will be limited.

Stop by ROBERTA FISHER TRAVEL AGENCY, Inc. for your copy of the curriculum. Or call 392-6320. Our office is located across from the train station at 14 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Travel lore

TRAVEL EDITOR

Planning a real luxury vacation?

If you've decided, in spite of all the talk of inflation, to "hang the expense" and really "live it up" this summer, you don't have to look far to find a regal kind of holiday.

Mary Okay, of the Midwest office of Air France, is touting a series of special tours designed to whet the appetite of folks who like to consider themselves connoisseurs of haute cuisine and fine wines. Does that fit you?

I can't think of a better city in the world to set the stage for this kind of razzle-dazzle, "be good to yourself" vacation than glittering, glorious Paris.

From there you can journey on to Burgundy to sample wines from the world's most famous vineyards, to Cotes du Rhone and the Loire Valley — with gourmet meals and first-class accommodations all the way. There are several variations of this 15-day Wine and Gourmet tour. Your travel agent has details.

FOR LESS TIME and money there's a nine-day program leaving Nov. 12, with wine-tasting in Paris, Epernay, Reims and on to Dijon, the heart of Burgundy, where you take in a colorful and somewhat spectacular auction in the medieval town of Beaune.

Mary, who flits back and forth from Chicago to Paris about as often as some of us commute from the suburbs to the city, has passed along some packing "do's" and "don'ts" for Europe-bound travelers.

DO select easy, care-free clothes, washable synthetics and knits that need little or no ironing, and cotton things that "breathe well" so that heat escapes.

DO put breakables, valuables (camera, jewelry), and one change of clothing in your carry-on luggage.

DO take along an extra pair of prescription glasses, sunglasses or contacts and a copy of your prescription.

DO use plastic bags for shoes, delicate, and damp or soiled items. Plastic containers for powders and liquids prevent breakage and save weight.

DON'T FORGET to put name and address stickers on both the inside and outside of all your bags.

DON'T take more luggage than you can carry yourself. Porters are not always available.

DON'T carry items which need care, like fountain pens which may leak or need refilling.

And, no matter what you have planned, take half the clothes you think you'll need! Personally, I've found that sticking to a few good basic mix-and-match outfits is the best of all ways to travel lightly and have more fun.

Here are suggested travel wardrobes (his and hers) for two or three weeks in Europe this summer.

For Her:

Two travel outfits (pant suits, suits or dresses)

Four blouses (two sport, two dressy)

Two skirts, one short and one long for evening wear

Three sweaters (pullover, cardigan and dressy)

One ensemble that can go anywhere

Three sets lingerie, nightgown, good supply of hose

One lightweight robe that can also double as beach cover-up

One swim suit

Three purses (travel, city, evening)

Two pairs of shoes (one for walking and one for dress) — also remember slippers, scarves, gloves, costume jewelry, belts and other accessories

One raincoat — practical, but pretty enough to do double duty.

For Him:

Two suits, two pairs slacks, two belts, two pairs shoes

One sports jacket, one sweater

Six shirts, six pairs socks, six pairs underwear, ties, handkerchiefs

One set pajamas, robe and slippers

Swim trunks

Don't forget these helpful extras: inflatable hangers, plastic shirt or sweater bags, extra passport photos, second set of suitcase keys, travel iron, alarm clock, band-aids, scotch tape, moist towels, tweezers, nail file, tissues, cotton balls and a sewing kit.

Then, of course, there's your passport. Be sure it's in order — and for goodness sakes, don't PACK it!

Describes America's riches

New book proves a real treasure

by MURRAY J. BROWN

NEW YORK — "The treasures of America have a character and quality unlike those of any other place: they are a direct expression of the vitality derived from the blending of many peoples from many different countries and cultures."

So reads, in part, the introduction to a new book which both the sedentary and peripatetic should find interesting and rewarding.

"Treasures of America," published by Reader's Digest, is a 624-page volume packed with descriptions of 5,000 of America's man-made treasures, more than 800 color illustrations and 10 maps.

The publishers say it is the first time so many outstanding attractions, which collectively represent the cultural development and heritage of our nation, have been assembled in a single book.

They include museums and art collections, houses of worship, historic homes both humble and grand, monuments and sculptures, bridges and dams, trains and automobiles, parks and gardens, silverware and furniture, among others.

TO AID THE traveler — or reader — the book divides the U.S. into nine separate regions, each containing about 550 treasures. Each section is preceded by a "treasure map" with symbols that point the way to the varied attractions in the area.

There's something for just about everybody.

Museum buffs will find more than a dozen between Rochester and Syracuse, N. Y. within 100 miles are the 120-year-old Canal Museum of Syracuse, the last surviving structure relating to operation of New York's 19th century canal system; Syracuse's Everson Museum of Art; the Glenn H. Curtis Museum of Local History and the Graydon Taylor Wino Museum, both in Hammondsport; the Arnot Art Museum and Chemung County Historical Center Museum in Elmira and Ogdensburg's Remington Art Museum, among others.

Devotees of great buildings will find Region 2, the Eastern seacoast, a paradise. According to the book, Boston and New York have more museums, churches, historic houses and famous buildings than any other two cities in the nation.

Students of the 18th and 19th century will enjoy Region 3. This area, from New Jersey and Pennsylvania to as far south as Virginia, is literally a treasure trove of colonial and federal houses, great plantation manors and pioneer log cabins. Memories of the Revolutionary and Civil Wars are evoked by dozens of battlefield monuments and memorials.

REGION 4, The Southeast, is rich with prehistoric Indian mounds, Spanish forts, Georgian town houses and frontier mountain cabins. Of special interest is the Kolomoki Mounds State Park in Blakely, Ga., with its remnants of the Kolomoki culture that flourished in the 12th and 13th centuries.

New Salem to relive historic past on weekend

New Salem Village, Abraham Lincoln's home for six years, returns to life in dramatic fashion Saturday and Sunday in the Dept. of Conservation's 1974 presentation of "New Salem Days — A Sketch in Time," at Lincoln's New Salem State Park, 19 miles northwest of Springfield.

From 1 to 9 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday historic structures in the park community will come alive with costumed "families" carrying on daily chores and activities of New Salem's pioneer inhabitants, such as cooking, candle dipping, butter churning, soap making, sewing, knitting, wool and flax spinning, quilting, broom making, wool carding and flax breaking.

The village's mills, blacksmith and cooperage shops, post office and stores will be "open for business," and the school — complete with stern school master — will be in session. Pill rolling will be demonstrated in the cabin-office of Dr. John Allen.

COSTUMED craftsmen will demonstrate natural dyeing of wool and flax cloth, preparation of dyes from plants and roots, well-witching, construction of rope beds, assembly of apple and corn-husk dolls, rail splitting, working oxen and other frontier skills. New Salem's smokehouse will be in operation and a log structure will be erected on the site in a demonstration of building techniques and tools of the 1880s.

Visitors may attend school classes and participate during recess periods in hoop rolling, sack races, leap frog, foot races and other games enjoyed by early Illinois settlers' youngsters. Period music will be offered by a strolling dulcimer player.

The park's museum, displaying tools, furniture, household implements and clothing actually used by New Salem's residents, will be open throughout the two-day observance. Admission is free.

Visitors also may take 45-minute rides on the "Talisman," a replica of the first steamboat to ply the Sangamon River between New Salem and Springfield.

India 'destination' for travel night

A special travel night featuring India will be presented by First Arlington International Travel at 7:45 p.m., Wednesday night in the lobby of the First Arlington National Bank, One North Dunton St., Arlington Heights.

Two color films, "Pageant of India" and "Music and Handicrafts of India" will be shown.

Eustace Pereira, vice-counsel and director of tourism of India for the Midwest, and Stanley Ahmad of Bombay, India, will be on hand to describe highlights of their country and answer questions, according to Hugh M. Gillespie, travel manager.

Current fashions of India will also be shown and refreshments will be served following the show.

Horse caravans available to tour the 'Emerald Isle'

I read your Travel Lore column which mentioned caravanning in Ireland. Can you give me some idea of prices?

Mrs. T. R., Arlington Heights

It runs from about $36 in spring and fall to around $110 in the tourist season during July and August. This includes cooking utensils, bottled gas and oats for the horses. If you stop at overnight parks which have showers and other facilities the fee will probably be $1.20 to $1.80 per night for caravan and horse. For more detailed information, contact the Irish Tourist Board, 224 N. Michigan, Chicago.

Could you explain about visas and tell me where they are required?

Mrs. W. S., Buffalo Grove

Visas are endorsements stamped in your passport by representatives of foreign governments in the U.S. giving you permission to visit their countries. No visas are required for travelers to Western Europe or to Latin America, but a visa is still required by a few countries in Eastern Europe, Africa and Asia. Check with your travel agent to see if the country or countries you are visiting will require visas.

Is Lanai, the Pineapple Isle of Hawaii, a place to visit? I know it is basically a pineapple plantation but I understand the scenery and serenity of the place are great. How about visitor accommodations?

Congress: —the world's most costly rest home?

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When New York Congressman Mario Biaggi began debating the wisdom of nuclear proliferation the other day, his colleagues on the floor of the House of Representatives responded to the gravity of the subject with characteristic carelessness. They clogged the aisles, turned their backs, laughed, dozed, or picked their noses while reading from their lips.

The gavel interrupted Biaggi three times for "order in the House," but there was no order nor, perhaps, good sense. In human times best and generously described as uncertain, the Congress of the United States displays little official concern. At the time Biaggi was speaking to the deaf, the Senate chamber across the way was yawning through the business of the day with but 3 of 100 members present.

Veterans here say the situation is not unusual, that the floors are always rowdy and business usually left undone. But precedent does not legitimize sloth; and indeed, what's wrong and risky in times past is even more negligent in times present. What with Watergate, inflation and daily predictions of worldwide doom, a lazy legislature is no longer a Will Rogers gag but a roadblock to the way out.

"When I'm asked about Congress," said Rep. Ed Koch (D-N.Y.), "I say it's doing a lousy job." Indeed. And seldom so lousy as now.

Though some 44 states have passed nearly 70 laws reforming political campaigning, the Congress has done nothing. Though millions realize immediate legislation is needed to regulate land use in the nation, Congress collectively is not interested.

Though Rep. Martha Griffiths warns that unless the rise of food prices does not abate there may be 60 million eligible for welfare by 1976, Congress slumbers over the subject.

Not long ago a bill was introduced in the House to allow voter registration by mail; it was pure and simple and would have helped the poor, the elderly and eventually the nation, but it went down like a stone in the Potomac.

Although much of this failure is hidden in small paragraphs in the public prints, the public is not unaware. Opinion polls indicate that nearly two of three citizens are negative about Congress. So deep is the resentment, in fact, there is growing talk of a forming voter rebellion.

Several anti-vote and anti-Congress groups have already surfaced in the nation and some politicians are mumbling of the day, perhaps in November, "when they hold an election and nobody comes."

The rationale of the non-vote is given by a Californian named Sy Leon, a libertarian and founder of the League of Non-Voters. He believes Americans should realize they are better than their government and show their contempt by boycotting the polls.

That way, with only a few voting, presidents and congressmen could not govern under the guise of mandate, and would, it says here, be less likely to function in an absent, arrogant or asinine legislative manner.

The theory, intellectually flawed, also has the historic American taint of patriotic heresy about it. Yet it is a fact that to some extent the voter rebellion has already begun.

Leon reminds that 60 million of the 144 million eligible voters did not cast ballots in 1972. He says also that the recent California primary was conducted with only 47.3 per cent of the eligible voters (down from 62.2 per cent in 1970). Ignorance accounts for some of this, no doubt, but surely dissatisfaction and frustration does, too.

Clearly, even many of those who do vote are fed up. And if they looked more closely at their Congress, they might throw up. Rep. Charles Wiggins (R-Calif.) was saying here recently that "People's wants are irrational — they want high quality service at no cost." What garbage. The people are paying $300 billion a year for service, including a half billion to the legislative branch and more than $6 billion to the Executive Office; that's more than enough to expect a little less wind and a lot more substance from this negligent town.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

by RAY CHOMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "I've got two opponents who want to run against me the next time. One is a rich one, and I don't know what the other one is. Boy, will I fix them! I'm not going to fix them during the campaign but I sure will fix them afterwards. They'll wish they'd never run against me." —From an interview in an unpublished research study on the Congress.

Paul E. Beard and Stephen Horn while with the Brookings Institution obtained that quote from one of the 50 members of the House of Representatives to whom they talked. They received written response to questions from 43 other representatives.

One thing that comes through loud and clear from reading the preliminary draft of this study is that cover ups in Congress are as thorough as cover ups at the White House — and more effective.

Normally the lid is clamped down quickly on any reports of wrongdoing by a member. There is a strong tendency in the House of Representatives, Beard and Horn found, to protect members who step out of line. Members don't want scandal to become public because it hurts everybody.

Congressmen who attempt to expose and clean up corruption — voting for pay, illegal financing, blatant conflict of interest — among their fellow members, and even those who merely criticize other members, get the freeze treatment. Their bills die in committees. They don't get cooperation on votes for projects their districts need. They personally are ignored.

Time after time, congressmen interviewed said something along these lines, "A guy's finances are his own business, providing that they do not bring Congress as a whole into disrepute."

The attitude is see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil. Action is taken as in the case of the late Adam Clayton Powell only when there is a strong public outcry which proves so embarrassing to Congress it cannot be ignored.

Otherwise Beard and Horn found that on the whole ethical standards as such appeared to be not that important to the congressmen they talked to.

The New York Bar Association recommended investment policies for congressmen which minimize conflicts of interest, avoidance of financial interests in areas of committee responsibilities, disqualification from official action on matters affecting personal interest, avoidance of supplemental office funds and avoidance of double-dome law practice assignments. Beard and Horn say none of these matters has yet been incorporated in any rule of the House.

It is clear, Beard and Horn conclude, pressure for change must come from a public outcry that is loud and strong. They hope the Watergate shock waves will be powerful enough to prod action. This may be more wish than reality.

Portrait of a hero

Herald opinion

It's the game that counts

The Illinois General Assembly, always creative, has invented yet another game with which to while away the time in Springfield.

It is called Please Pass the Budget.

Not entirely original, it combines the basic playing board, markers and elements of dumb luck of the former Capitol favorite, You Must Pass the Budget.

Under the constitution of the old game, the players had a time limit of June 30, by which time the players must have divided up all the marbles in the game among themselves. Any which had not been won by any player (or put in his "porkubarru," a term borrowed from an ancient Korean game), was forfeited to the kitty (taksu-paya).

In 1970, however, a statewide association of games experts known as Continuing Conviviality (CON-CON), proposed an alternate set of rules, the most fundamental of which was removal of the June 30 deadline.

This was derived from a long-debated rules change advocated for a national game by Nathan Penchbasket, but never accepted by organized basketball.

Penchbasket wanted to give the basketball team which was behind at the final gun the option of continuing play. If the trailing team could come within five points of the leaders, the captain could then holler, "Constitutional Crisis!" and the leaders would lose by default. At any time, however, if three-fifths of the spectators rose and yelled, "Payless Paydays!" play would cease and the game would be declared a draw.

After testing the new rules last year — the game went until July 2 — the legislature gave it a full-scale workout this year.

Both sides of the legislature chose honorary captains, with Attorney General William Scott heading one team, and Gov. Daniel Walker the other.

By skillful maneuvering, both teams managed to stall past the June 30 deadline without allowing the other to pick up the marbles — but neither was able to Pass the Budget.

A member of Walker's team, Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, immediately began hollering "Constitutional Crisis!" But though she was a member of Continuing Conviviality, she was not the captain of the team and neither the umpire or the referee (or spika and presen) would recognize her.

The game continued through several overtimes and it looked for awhile that all the marbles would be left in the kitty.

But then Scott's bench advised him that if the game were not decided quickly, the crowd was going to scream, "Payless Paydays!" Taking advantage of a little-known rule, Scott asked the officials for a huddle (press-u-confrans) and said he wished to avoid that yell from the crowd.

So Scott and Walker met at mid-court and declared the Budget Passed. Both were cheered and carried off the floor on the shoulders of their teammates.

It was an anti-climatic end to an otherwise exciting test of the new rules, but it promises even more suspenseful games in the Capitol in coming years.

Dorothy Meyer's column

I gave at the office—drip, drip...

Dorothy Meyer

I've always maintained that there is absolutely nothing to be afraid of about being a blood donor and I could say it absolutely because I've never been afraid. Which is probably because I've never been able to donate because of a handy case of anemia.

Until last Wednesday.

That's when the company blood drive was held and, knowing I couldn't pass the physical and even if I did that my doctor would veto the whole thing, I nobly signed up. Then I called my doctor and the traitor said, "Go ahead, women sometimes cease to be anemic at your age and it won't hurt to get a free blood test and your blood pressure checked."

Sure, doc.

When they stick that needle in your finger to make you bleed so they can see if you bleed red or pale pink, IT HURTS. It hurts even more to find out that you're "a woman of your age," and there isn't a reason in the whole bleeding world that you can't donate. Blood, yet.

That wasn't what I had in mind when I signed up and the company bulletin said, "If you can't give blood, please bring cookies for the donors to snack on," and I planned on bringing brownies.

I wondered at the time — if I flunked my physical and donated brownies instead of blood and some day I needed blood would the doctor say, "Inject 200 cc of brownies and I'll take coffee with a cruller" — but I figured to worry about that when the time came.

Then suddenly last Wednesday, there I was, stuck with a double batch of brownies, a dull needle and a clean bill of health. But I still wasn't scared even though the lady with the needle asked me to stop waving to my friends so she could get on with her work and I said I'm not waving at anybody and she said, "You could have fooled me."

Next I had to wait.

You shouldn't have to wait at a time like that. It gives you time to think and I thought, "What am I doing here," just like the time I was waiting to take my driver's test.

I noticed things, too.

Like people going into the bloodletting room and never coming out.

And the company person in charge of the program.

She's a good friend and I go to lunch with her almost every day, but I never before realized what long eye teeth she has. Every time I looked at her they seemed to get longer and when she said, "Hey, Dorothy, you're not supposed to get pale until after you give blood," she also had a Transylvanian accent I'd never noticed before. And she was wearing a red pants suit. Blood red. So the spots wouldn't show.

Then it was my turn.

There was really nothing to it. But how come my eye teeth are getting longer?

Kinsolving lacks fairness

Reverend Lester Kinsolving uses the time-tested approach — if you cannot attack the issue, attack the proponents — in his Religion Today column of June 26, 1974.

Some examples:

1. Reverend Kinsolving connects U.S. Representative Lawrence Hogan, R-Md. with the terms "living in sin" and "illegitimate."

2. Reverend Kinsolving connects anti-abortion supporters with the terms "anti-abortion fanatics" and "mindless and crude."

3. Reverend Kinsolving equates Justice William Brennan's not being excommunicated for his vote on the abortion issue with a form of acceptance by the Catholic Church.

Further, it appears that Reverend Kinsolving is, however for those who see abortions as killing unborn babies (exactly what it is) the problem of allowing a discussion on abortion at a Catholic university or granting a Catholic university honorary degree to a pro-abortion advocate can be traumatic. How does Reverend Kinsolving feel about an honorary degree to Ian Smith from Malcomb X College or a discussion of Professor William Shockley's theories at the University of Wisconsin?

A little fairness is all that is asked of Reverend Kinsolving and, by the way, isn't there an old-fashioned sin about spreading malicious gossip?

Park care not up to its billing?

Regarding a short article in the June 25 Herald stating Mr. Hagen's appreciation to village workers in readying Chino Park for the June 1 start of the baseball season:

Our Little League was scheduled to start May 25. Chino Park was in miserable condition for approximately two weeks after that date, resulting in cancelled games or last minute scrambles for alternate fields. The delay of the start of the season was particularly disappointing.

The teams using Ash Park recently were still not able to use the diamond because of a huge mud hole that could easily be filled in with sand. They used the area adjacent to the diamond; it was uneven and dangerous for the boys and they had to play without the benefit of a backstop.

The people or organizations responsible for preparing the playing fields certainly are not fulfilling their duties in my estimation.

Backgammon

Roll of die decides who will move first by OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

(Second of a Series)

At the start of a backgammon game, each player rolls one die. Under the most common rules, if both players roll the same number they must roll again until the numbers differ.

The player with the higher number goes first, moving his men according to the numbers shown on both his die and the die his opponent rolled. Thereafter, the players take turns rolling both dice.

The number that comes up on each die becomes the number of spaces that the player must move. Thus, if the dice show a six and a three, one man would be moved six spaces, and then another or the same man would be moved three spaces (or vice versa). If doubles are rolled, they are played twice. Thus, 3-3 would result in four moves of three spaces each.

The men are moved in opposing directions, and the winner of the game is the player who first removes all of his own men from the board.

The last six spaces on each end of the board are called a player's home or inner table. Before any man can be removed from the board, all 15 men must rest in the home table.

Any number of friendly men may occupy the same point, but you may not move to a point on which your opponent has two or more men. You may occupy a point on which your opponent has a single man, thus, hitting a blot. Your opponent's man is then removed from the board and placed on the bar. Your opponent cannot move any man until he has rolled a number enabling the man on the bar to come in on your home table.

Win at bridge

East makes untimely double

The game was match point duplicate. West's opening two-spade bid was one of those weak two-bids that have become quite popular in tournament and some rubber bridge circles.

The bid would have worked out very well if East had not been greedy. Two spades would not make and with normal play three clubs would have been down one, but East elected to make one of those match-point doubles designed to pick up 200 points if lucky.

He wasn't lucky. West opened the nine of hearts. The queen was played from dummy and after prolonged thought East let it hold. South led a trump from dummy and East played low quickly, but unsuccessfully. South believed the double and finessed his 10. After this it was a simple matter for South to cash his top diamonds; ruff the last one; cash his ace and king of trumps; and eventually wind up with nine tricks and the top score East had hoped for.

East blamed his partner for not opening and continuing spades, but that defense would not have worked either provided South played East for both club honors as he surely would have against whatever line of defense was used against him.

What's in a nickname? Weird ones keep 'em guessing

Stan
"The Man"
Musial

by ART MUGALIAN

A guy wrote a letter to the Sporting News recently for help on a most peculiar question. Explaining that he was researching a history of the Boston Red Sox, the man wanted to know the origin of "Hobe" Ferris' nickname.

Now not everybody knows who Hobe Ferris was. "Hobe," Albert Sayles Ferris, played second base for Boston and St. Louis of the American League between 1901 and 1909. He only hit .239 but he played in more than 1,000 games.

The Sporting News couldn't solve the mystery of Hobe's nickname. Ferris has been dead for 36 years. The poor guy who wrote the letter had tried everywhere before going public with his query. He appears to be stumped on a tough one — how could a man acquire a nickname like "Hobe?"

If he had asked an easier question, he would have gotten some response. After all, we know the derivation of "Bullet Bob," "Joltin' Joe," and "Stan The Man." These are the simple ones. The average fan understands the psychology behind every Rapid Robert and Sudden Sam.

But what about the players who earned picturesque tags while toiling for only a few obscure seasons in the big leagues? What about the guy who came up for six games in 1905 and lives in eternity as "Home Run" Schwartz? And what about the really weird nicknames?

Paging through MacMillan's new Baseball Encyclopedia, you can get an idea of the vast array of colorful nicknames that have filled baseball rosters over the years.

How, for instance, did Moonlight Ace Fussell get his nickname? Obviously, one night out on the back porch at home in Sheridan, Mo., Fussell drew four big aces, taking the evening's big pot as the man in the moon smiled down. Or, perhaps Fussell carded a midnight hole-in-one at the Sheridan Country Club. Maybe he just claimed he did. In either case, a nickname was born.

Walter Arlington Latham, a New Hampshire native, played ball for 17 seasons, mostly prior to the turn of the century, and it isn't too hard to figure out why his teammates called him Arlie. But try to explain that other nickname — "the freshest man on earth."

Perhaps Latham liked to insult waitresses in the St. Louis beer gardens.

Habjan's 67 leads Illinois Open

Esposito 3 back of leader

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Like Ferris' Hobby Habjan journeyed from O'Connell's Country Club to Rolling Green for the Illinois Open and ripped the course for a 32-35-67 and a three-day total of 134.

Three players were bunched at 70, including Mount Prospect's Emil Esposito (32-37-70) with the second day of competition to come. After Tuesday's rounds, Esposito and Esposito will get together Wednesday to decide the championship.

A one shot for second at that 70 mark are Odell Trucloud of Lincoln (37-37-70), and Bob Storeland of Pekin (34-38-70).

The Herald area, except for the play of Mike Harrigan from Arlington Heights and Esposito — head pro from Dominion Golf and Country Club, took something of a bath in the first round. Harrigan, who plays out of Rolling Green, was in a six way jam for third after shooting a 71. Three of these six were amateurs.

Harrigan, feeling off early in the morning with the first threesome, rounded the head at one over par but handled the back nine in two under for his one-under effort.

Starting off in the same group with Harrigan was Mario Vitale from Roy Roy in Prospect Heights. Vitale set the stage for high scores to come from other area golfers when he soared to a 39-43-82.

Twenty-four minutes later Scott Anderson, of Arlington Heights out of Inverness Country Club, teed off to begin a 31-38-79 round.

Steve Jenke, an assistant club pro at Rolling Green, fired a three over par 42-33-75.

The high scores spelled out trouble to come for golfers Monday. The Rolling Green course is not especially long, a mere 6165 yards, and the pin placements are traditionally easier in the opening rounds.

Rolling Green is a finely manicured course though, without any of the horrendous rough that golf spectators have been used to seeing recently at PGA events.

The high area scores continued as the afternoon threesomes went out with Brad Stake from Arlington Heights and Stonehenge Golf Club struggling to a 38-39-77. Jim Urban of Buffalo Grove had a 39-40-79 and Palatine's George Capoun, the head pro at Inverness, had a 37-39-78.

David Nelson, of Mount Prospect, and Kenneth Barrios, from Wheeling, were other area golfers who scored over eighty.

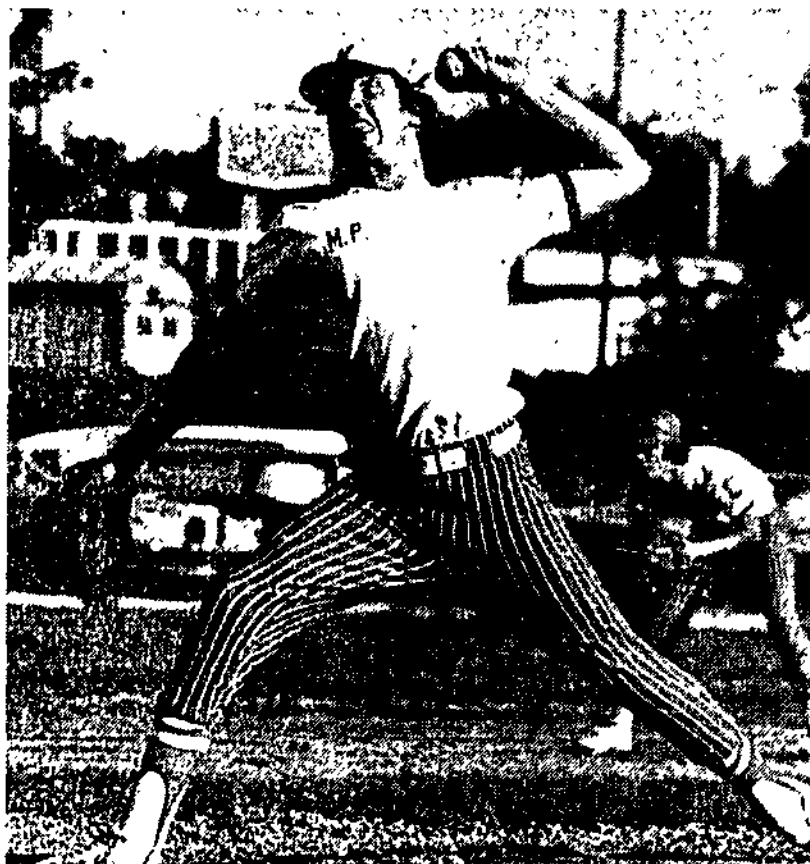

Tom Jacobsen, playing out of White Pines Golf Club, had a 38-37-75 and Leonard Flocca, also from White Pines, shot a 37-40-77.

A pair of Arlington Heights players, including Bill Ventresca, the head pro at Rolling Green, rounded out the area's showing.

Chris Marszalek, playing out of Hillcrest Country Club, finished with a 39-38-77 while Ventresca came in with the final three-some of the day with 39-38-76.

The prize money at stake for the top thirty golfers breaks down to $2,200 for the winner, right down to $50 for the 30th finisher.

Habjan will attempt to protect and add to his lead today when he tees off at 1:18 p.m.

... Jerry: 'Jack, you dirty son of a bleep!'

McGee doesn't talk like a rabbit...

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK—(NEA)—In the clubhouse at the end of a day on the professional golf tour, Gary Player was telling a reporter, "You think this life is a bed of roses? Let me tell you something, my friend, I have to leave home for six weeks at a time. I have to leave my wife and six children in South Africa. Do you know what that does to me? It chokes me up so bad I cry like a baby."

Another troubled soul, Arnold Palmer, who had just changed shoes after a fozzled round, was asked where he was going now. "To jump some rope," he replied in despair.

This would seem to put Jerry McGee in good company, for neither was he brimming with joy. He had just slogged in and out of rough and bunker. He had done so with an injured thumb. His wife had been waiting for him at the end of 18, but that seemed little consolation. And now Jerry McGee headed to the practice tee to rummage around for his stroke.

And there the similarities of Arnold Palmer and Gary Player with Jerry McGee abruptly halt.

Palmer and Player have won an overflowing abundance of golf tournaments. McGee, on the tour for seven years, has never even won one.

He is still considered one of the "Rabbits," those band of young players who must qualify for tournaments on Monday, whereas the old pros are exempt from such low-life activity and simply slip in on Thursday, the first day of a tourney.

McGee takes exception to being characterized as a rabbit. "Can you name me one player who resembles in any manner, shape or form a rabbit?" he once indignantly asked at a press conference.

Yet even he will not deny that he must hop from one tournament to another to earn living expenses. He has, in fact, had some very fine years, earning over $50,000 in them, but the tour with its planes and equipment and motels and dinners and myriad other expenses can rapidly shrink a buck.

"I feel numb," he said recently, "from traveling and playing so much."

Life for him, however, is sweeter than it is bitter. Golf is a passion, and it's easier than working in the mines where others from his hometown of New Lexington, Ohio (not far from Youngstown) work.

As for his lackluster tour record, McGee's consolation is that if he continues to struggle and concentrate like Player, he may one day reach the same heights.

He consoles himself with the knowledge that a Palmer has miserable frustrations, too. "Look at Arnie out there," said McGee. "He is trying so hard that water spurts when he grips the club."

And McGee, almost 31 years old, will tell you without being asked that Ben Hogan didn't win his first tournament until he was 37 years old.

McGee, like Hogan, is smallish. He stands 5-9½, weighs 160 pounds. His greatest handicap at the moment is his injured left thumb and the wrist. He takes cartload shots but still plays in pain.

It's a different kind of pain, in fact, from when he began the tour in 1967. Then, a veteran named Gardner Dickinson told him, "Beware of the snakes in the grass." That is, some veterans would try to throw a novice off his game since the youngsters were a threat to the grizzled breadwinners.

If they saw a newcomer hitting solid shots, they might say, "Gee, it's amazing you can hit so well with that terrible grip." Then the newcomer would start wondering what in the hell is wrong with his grip.

"The most famous guy for such tricks was Tommy Bolt," said McGee. "He used to hit 'soft shots.' You see, he'd be playing with a new guy and Bolt would hit a six-iron, but not with his full strength. The new guy would look in Bolt's bag to see what the veteran hit, then he'd use a six-iron too. And whack it over the green." McGee has come through all this to where he hopes he is on the threshold of fame, fortune — and victory.

The closest he ever came to winning was in the 1971 Byron Nelson Open. He led after three rounds.

In the last round he was beaten by two strokes by Jack Nicklaus. Now, McGee and Nicklaus go back a long way. They competed together in junior tournaments in Ohio. Later, McGee followed Nicklaus to Ohio State. McGee says he has the highest admiration for Nicklaus both as a friend and a golfer. "He is courteous, helpful, and, for all his publicity and success, a guy with no swollen head."

"He is also a thorough professional. That's why he went and tried to beat me, even though he knew how much a tour win would mean to me. And I respect him for his attitude."

"Regardless, at the eighteenth hole, I shook Jack's hand and told him exactly how I felt. I said, 'Jack, you dirty son of a bleep.'"

Thunderstorm thwarts all-stars

Sunday's unexpected thunderstorm washed out the Ninth District American Legion All-Star game, scheduled for St. Viator's baseball diamond at 3 p.m. Even though the sun was shining and the temperature was back in the 80's by game time, the field was unplayable due to standing water.

District commissioner Gene Sackett announced a meeting for Wednesday at which the league's coaches would somehow try to salvage the all-star contest, a showdown between Wheeling, the league's first place team, and the league's stars. The main problem will be finding time for the game. The league schedule is in its final week before tourney time and, with several makeup games already slated, it will be difficult to squeeze in the game.

But Sackett said that every effort would be made to play the game.

Heights in last Thursday's game at Rec Park, which was won by Arlington Heights, 5-4.

On your marks... Paddock VIII begins in 1 week

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

The countdown to the beginning of Paddock Olympics VIII begins today with a week remaining until the opening events of the two-day competition.

The annual confrontation between the area park districts' outstanding athletes between the age of 8 and 13 is expected to attract a record number of participants.

At stake is the team championship won last year by Palatine Park District and a host of individual titles and honors. Palatine, with Mount Prospect, will host the competitions to be held on two separate sites this year.

The concept of different sites for the softball and tennis and track competitions was fostered out of the belief that last year's Olympiad had the contestants wasting too much time waiting to compete. The subsequent restlessness made the youngsters unhappy and hampered the Olympics operation.

The scoring and awards system are similar to last year. First of all, every participant in the Olympics will receive a Paddock Publications patch.

Ribbons will be awarded to the first five positions in each individual event and to the first three finishers in the team events. To the winning team will go a large traveling trophy they will keep for one year.

Palatine Park District would need to win again this year to benefit from the traveling trophy since the 1972 Olympic champion, Elk Grove, never got around to traveling the trophy over to Palatine.

A year after winning the title a permanent plaque will be awarded to the winner.

The point system for scoring the various events breaks down this way: for the first through fifth positions points of 6-4-3-2-1 will be awarded respectively. In team events the winner will receive 10 points, second place eight and third place six.

In an effort to streamline the competition and clear up the problem of noncompeting youngsters milling about the grounds, several adjustments have been made.

First of all, the park districts must supply each participant with event card which bear the individual's name and age. The park district he or she is competing for and the event.

In addition, each park district will be assigned a section of the bleachers. All unauthorized personnel must remain in the bleachers. Participants are to remain in this area unless they are competing.

In an effort to make these new guidelines effective people who fail to comply with them run the risk of disqualification.

The first day of competition, Tuesday, July 23, will begin at 8:30 a.m. when the park districts assemble at Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 South Maple, in Mount Prospect to pick up entry cards.

Shortly after, around 9 a.m., the softball and tennis competition will begin and extend through the day to 5 p.m. with a short break for lunch.

The track and field events will be held the next day at the Palatine High School track, 150 East Webb. The park districts will again assemble at 8:30 a.m. to pick up entry cards. The east bleachers will be set up for the various park districts.

DICK ALLEN, Most Valuable Player in the American League in 1972, and the "bad boy" of the Chicago White Sox, still finds himself misunderstood by the press and many of the fans. Despite his problems, which include a few nagging injuries, Allen continues to lead both leagues in home runs, in addition to hitting around the .300 mark.

Sox star opens up

Dick Allen explains his many moods

CHICAGO (UPI) — "What did I do wrong?" Dick Allen asks quizzically. "Or to put it another way, what did I do that I wasn't supposed to do?"

Allen, first baseman for the Chicago White Sox, his fourth major league team, has become one of baseball's controversial figures. He played only one season with both St. Louis and Los Angeles after seven with Philadelphia.

In each city he has been rapped by baseball writers and booed by fans. Only in Chicago, where he had his greatest season in 1972, chosen most valuable player and leading the league in home runs and runs batted in, has he won wide fan acclaim, and that has diminished this season under repeated proddings by writers.

Allen believes that one reason he comes under fire is his salary, reputed to be $250,000 a year. "The money," he said, "A few games ago, after I struck out, some man in the stands yelled at me 'What makes you worth $250,000?'"

"I play baseball because I like it. It's fun. But if you were doing something you liked, and you saw a dollar bill on the ground, would you do it? Wouldn't you stop and pick it up? It's the same way with me. I'm not going to turn down money for doing what I like to do."

Allen, basically shy, sticks close to his apartment when the Sox are home, and close to his hotel room on the road. His teammates praise him and none object if he doesn't take batting practice, or comes late to spring training, or comes on the field early to sign autographs. The writers object to these habits.

"My teammates feel differently, maybe," Allen conjectured, "because they're with me on the road. They eat with me, see me around, and know that I spend most of my time in the hotel room. They know me."

"I try to keep my life on the field public and my life at home private and I don't think the writers recognize this. If I make an error on the field or strike out or something, go ahead and criticize me. Blame me. But what I do at home or away from the field, that's my business and nobody else's."

"My momma raised me right. She taught me the difference between right and wrong, and I haven't done anything wrong, even off the field. I haven't done anything I'm ashamed of, and so long as I know I haven't done anything wrong, no criticism is going to bother me. I've never given anything but my best."

Allen recently was criticized because he was out of a Saturday game before a Sunday doubleheader. He volunteered to play in the game, but Manager Chuck Tanner told him to take the day off. He spent it with his children.

"They tell me to think of the youngsters in the stands," he said. "Think of the kids. Well, I am, of my own kids."

"I don't get to spend much time with them because I'm gone all summer, so I welcome every chance to spend time with them. I don't want to come home when my son is taller than I am, and he looks at his mother and points at me and says 'who's that?'"

Two of his baseball injuries still trouble Allen. He suffered a hairline fracture in his leg last year, missing the last half of the season, and it pains him some. "But my hand is worse," he said. "The nerve was cut in that."

The hand was cut in 1969 when the headlight lens of a car he was pushing shattered and the glass gashed his hand. Now he has no feeling in two fingers on the right hand, his throwing hand.

"I can't feel the baseball," he said. "So I jam the ball into the hand with my glove. Then I know it's there and I can throw it."

The nerveless fingers also handicap his grip on the bat, resulting in heavy callouses on the palm of his hand. "I have to grip more with my palm than the fingers," he said. "So I can feel it."

Allen has a sizable investment in race horses, seven at the track and 16 at home, and he has received an unexpected dividend. "My kids love the horses," he said, "and my oldest boy, when offered a present, wanted six bales of hay. He's more concerned about the horses than himself, and I see how he's taken responsibility for them, and is thinking of them, and I like it."

Allen concedes he marches to his own music, and said "I think about what I'm doing, and if someone asks me to do something I don't think I should do, I don't do it. Gene Mauch (his manager at Philadelphia) asked me to do some things I didn't want to do and I didn't do them. But I didn't have any trouble with Red Schoendienst at St. Louis or Walter Alton at Los Angeles, and John Allyn White Sox owner and Chuck Tanner Sox manager have treated me fine."

"Sometimes I wonder how my baseball career would have been if I'd spent all my time with the White Sox."

His career might not have been much different, but certainly the fortunes of the White Sox would have been.

In addition to having fun, Allen is in baseball for his personal pride. "I want my name up there," he said, "and after I'm gone, I want some kids to come along, maybe my own, and say 'I can do better than that.' I want them to have something to look at and try and beat."

Already Allen has hung up some fancy figures for other generations to beat. This year he might hang up some more.

"He's having his greatest year," Tanner said. "I remember 1972 when he carried us, and he's playing even better now."

How much better does he have to get to avoid criticism?

Tennis marathon

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI) — The longest elapsed time for a major tennis match was the 6 hours, 23 minutes it required for the British team of Mark Cox and Bobby Wilson to defeat Charles Passarelli and Ron Holmberg of the United States at the U.S. Indoor Championships on Feb. 16, 1969.

What's in a name?

More likely, he was accustomed to carrying fresh fruit with him on the road.

But just imagine if Latham had a second career in the circus. With a billing like that, what would the "freshest man" do for an encore?

A man who wins 14 games in one big league season deserves a better nickname than "Rubber," even if it was in 1911. Poor Eugene H. Krapp got it coming and going in the name department. Suffice it to say that Rubber Krapp was not born in Akron. Actually he was born in Rochester, N. Y., and he should have been called "Camera" Krapp.

Someday, baseball historians will be speculating about the more obscure nicknames of today's players. Today's Cito Gaston will replace yesterday's Plano Legs Gorea.

They will wonder about Wilbur Wood's nickname — "Clump." The historians will need to see films of Wood ambling to the mound. Speculation on Mike "Pineapple King" Lum will run wild until somebody points out that Lum was born in Hawaii. And Gates Brown will surely have them guessing unless someone suggests that the Tiger slugger spent some time in prison.

Tomorrow's historians will have the same problem we have today as we try to figure out why William Van Winkle Wolf was called "Chicken" when he managed Louisville in 1829. Perhaps it had something to do with his team's record that year — 15-51.

The nicknames keep coming — Mountain Music Melton, The Only Nolan, Phenomenal Smith, Peasoup Dumont, Meow Gilmore. The handles might seem obvious, but who's to say? Was Masanori Murakami called Mister Transistor because he came from Japan or because he carried a radio everywhere he went?

So the Hobe Ferriss of the past will continue to puzzle the experts. All we can do is guess. Let's see — Hobe is short for Hoboken. No, that can't be right. Ferriss came from Providence.

And Casey Stengel was born in Kansas City.

Route to U.S. Women's Open

All roads lead to the 22nd United States Women's Open Championship at LaGrange Country Club this week.

Golf fans from the Herald area are just 40 minutes away from the stately club which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year with the first Women's Open ever staged in Chicago.

To watch the greats of the women's tour, all area fans need do is head south on the Tri-State Tollway, exiting on Ogden Avenue. Head east on Ogden, turning right on Brainerd Avenue.

If you can't find on street parking, park at either of the two Lyons Township High Schools for only $1. Continuous shuttle service will be offered from both sites, but the parking won't be available until after 12:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday at these school lots.

Practice rounds are being held through Wednesday with daily ground tickets costing $3. Regular grounds tickets for the official tournament days — Thursday through Sunday — are $5.

Tickets are on sale at the gates of the LaGrange Country Club, one block south of 47th Street on Brainerd Avenue in LaGrange.

Doering 2nd in Junior tennis tournament

There were quite a few near misses last Friday in area tennis tournaments.

While Paul Wei was coming up short at the Illinois State Junior, another Arlington Heights player was doing the same elsewhere. Namely, Glen Elynn.

Mike Doering, who will enroll as a freshman at Arlington this fall, finished second in doubles in the 14-and-under boys' tourney — the Glen Elynn Juniors.

Doering and last-minute partner Chris Neufeld of Lombard worked their way to the finals in the week-long affair before losing. Proving too powerful were Colin McAlin and Bruce Gordon, ranked 1-2 in Canada. This twosome — part of the Canadian team that participated in both tournaments — stopped Doering and Neufeld, 6-1, 6-1.

Doering and Neufeld, seeded third, knocked off the first-seeded team of

FLY WITH JONATHAN

The next night from the Flock came Kirk Maynard Gull, wobbling across the sand, dragging his left wing, to collapse at Jonathan's feet. "Help me," he said very quietly, speaking in the way that the dying speak. "I want to fly more than anything else in the world..."

"Come along then," said Jonathan. "Climb with me away from the ground, and we'll begin."

"You don't UNDERSTAND. My wing. I can't move my wing."

"Maynard Gull, you have the FREEDOM to be yourself, your TRUE self, here and now, and nothing can stand in your way. It is the law of the Great Gull, the Law that is."

"Are you saying I can fly?"

"I say you are FREE."

As simply and as quickly as that, Kirk Maynard Gull spread his wings, effortlessly, and lifted into the dark night air. The Flock was roused from sleep by his cry, as loud as he could scream it, from five hundred feet up: "I can fly! Listen! I CAN FLY!"

You too can be free, if you need to be.

CLERICAL

Supervisor

DO YOU HAVE A WAY WITH PEOPLE? FEEL YOUR PRESENT POSITION LEADS NOWHERE?

Here's your chance to get in on the ground floor. Establishment of a new division office has created a need for a PERSONAL LINES OPERATIONS SUPERVISOR.

Previous supervisory experience a definite plus! Your duties would include supervising clerical employees and you'd be responsible for their training, hiring, and salary administration. A high school diploma is required - college degree not necessary.

Our benefit program including cash bonus, company paid retirement, and major and minor medical is one of the finest.

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident. According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Mols, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Mols aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

For conflict of interest, secret land trusts

Hein and Metzger under probe by state's attorney

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Trustee William Hein and Plan Comr. Jack Metzger are the object of a State's Attorney's investigation into conflict of interest and secret land trusts, The Herald has learned.

Plan Comr. Gilbert Monoson began the probe last week when he presented information to the State's Attorney's Office about possible conflicts of interest involving Wheeling officials.

Asst. State's Atty. Thomas McDonough said the complaints made by Monoson will be followed up by normal procedure, which includes the issuing of grand jury subpoenas "to see if there is any substance to the charges."

Neither McDonough nor Monoson would elaborate on the nature of the charges made against Hein, Metzger and others.

Hein, however, has been repeatedly accused of conflict of interest for voting on the village purchase of auto parts equipment from the firm for which he works.

THE TRUSTEE IS employed by Wheeling Auto Parts, Inc., 141 S. Milwaukee Ave., a firm that sold the village more than $13,000 worth of auto parts equipment in the 1972-73 fiscal year. Gordon H. Hein, the trustee's father, is listed as president of that company.

Hein also has voted on purchases from B. C. Auto Parts, Inc. of Mundelein. Gordon P. Hein, the trustee's brother, is listed on state records as president of that company.

Metzger, a salesman for Diamond Outdoor Sign Co., was recently challenged for voting on projects proposed by developers to whom he sells billboards. Last month he abstained from voting on changes in the Harmony Village project after a resident charged that Metzger's firm had contracts for billboards at the project.

Hein said he has no knowledge of any investigation and charged that the matter is "purely political." He said an investigation will turn up no wrongdoings on his part. Metzger was unavailable for comment.

The investigation also reportedly involves secret land trusts which may include Hein, Metzger and other village officials as beneficiaries for property that has received favorable rezoning by the village.

MONOSON SAID he went to the state's attorney to help further investigations into official Wheeling corruption that began with a federal grand jury probe last year. Six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31 as a result of that probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

The plan commissioner said that many people in the village have information about official wrongdoings, but are afraid to come forward since it might jeopardize their jobs or lead to reprisals.

"I thought that perhaps since I am in a better position as far as my job, my standing in the village, that I could take the lead and hopefully act as an example to other people in the village," he said. "Someone has to start. There has to be a first person everytime."

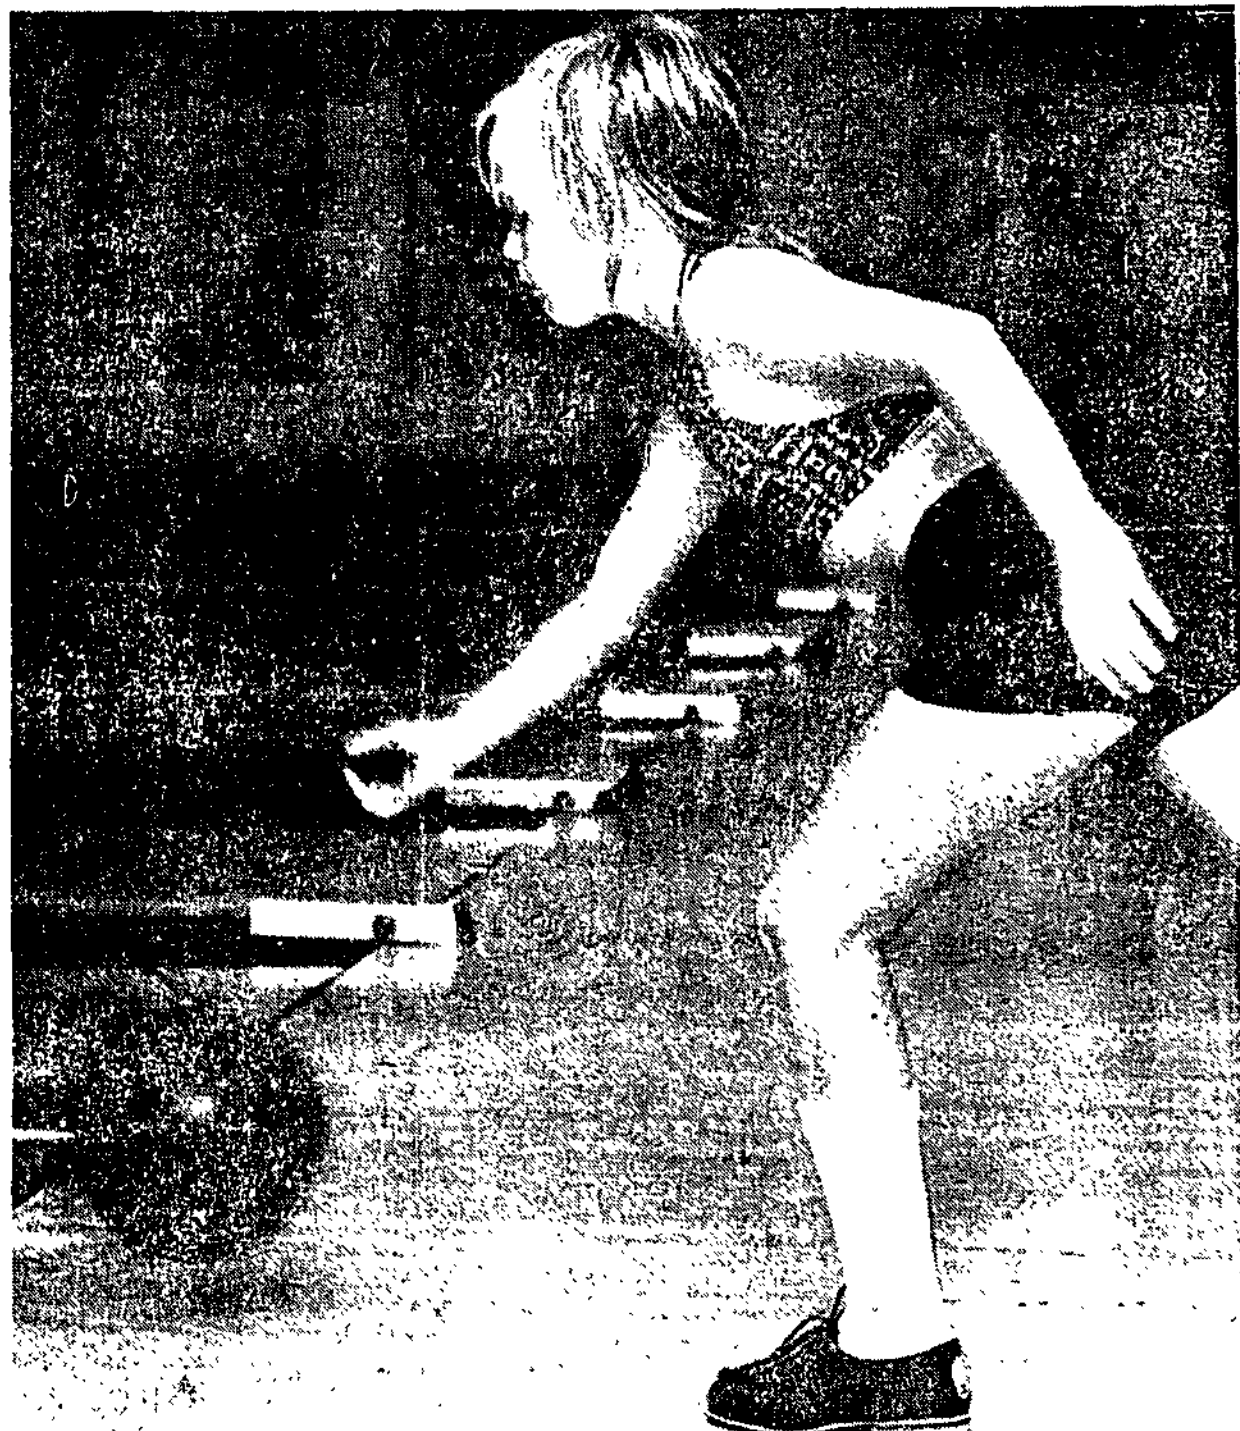

Monoson said his actions are not political or based on any personal vendetta, despite his recent run-in with Hein and Metzger. Metzger was reprimanded by the Wheeling Jaycees after accusing Monoson of cashing Jaycee checks for his own use. The charges were later called unfounded by the Jaycee board.

Monoson said he merely wants the investigation started by the U.S. Attorney's Office to continue with probes into "more basic and closer to home issues" like patronage pressure and conflicts of interest.

ALTHOUGH FOUR of the six indicted officials have been convicted, Monoson said that he wants to make sure "that the weed is not cut off at ground level."

"I am hoping that by a much more in-depth personal probe into all phases of Wheeling government that more and more people will come out and provide information about things that they know to be wrong," Monoson said.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Howard Stone, one of the federal prosecutors, has said that while the federal probe into official Wheeling corruption is continuing, the local community should take a more active role in the investigation.

Monoson reveals real estate holdings

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Plan Comr. Gilbert Monoson is the first village official to disclose real estate holdings in an effort to bring about disclosure by all commissioners and board members.

Monoson presented the village board with a sworn affidavit of his property holdings Monday night, which stated that he owns property at 42 Berkshire Dr. "I own only the property on which my house is situated," he said.

In calling for full disclosure by all village officials, Monoson said that such openness is needed to reestablish confidence in Wheeling government. He noted the recent scandal in which six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted after a year-long federal grand jury probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

"The time has come for the appointed and elected officials of the Village of Wheeling to take the first of probably many measures necessary to restore and renew the confidence of their constituents in village government," he said.

"For too long now many of the incumbent trustees and commissioners have been linked with special interest groups and have been accused of conflicts of interest with respect to these groups."

MONOSON ASKED that the village enact an ordinance requiring full disclosure of all real estate holdings by appointed and elected officials and their families. He said the disclosure should include the holdings of spouses, children, parents, brothers and sisters.

"In addition, it is imperative that these disclosures reveal if any of the aforementioned people are beneficiaries of any secret land trusts," Monoson said.

Noting that such an ordinance might be unenforceable because of limits on the village's jurisdiction, Monoson offered the statement of his holdings and called on other officials to take similar action. He said that even if the ordinance were unenforceable, persons with nothing to hide would abide by the policy set forth by the village board.

SEVERAL REFORM measures proposed by the village board have been vetoed by Village Atty. Paul Hamer, who has maintained that the village does not have the statutory authority to enact such regulations.

Monoson said that even if the village does not have the proper authority to enforce the ordinance, the call for disclosure can be made with officials volunteering the requested information.

McHenry Road residents plan speed-limit campaign

Wheeling residents from developments along McHenry Road are organizing a campaign to get drivers to travel at 35 m.p.h. along that street.

Since the state sets its speed limits according to the speeds that drivers travel, the residents hope to be able to get them to travel slower.

The campaign grew out of a mass rally by residents last week, which was called to organize for lower speed limits along McHenry Road.

WHEELING RESIDENTS have been complaining about the McHenry Road traffic ever since the area began to attract apartment and townhouse projects. Three persons have been killed in fatal auto accidents on that stretch of road during the last year.

The residents formed an "inter-development committee" designed to organize the 33-mile-per-hour campaign and other efforts to get the speed limits reduced.

Cyndi Fredrickson, acting secretary of the Cedar Run Homeowners Assn., said the group plans to push for a reduction of speed limits from 30 m.p.h. to 40 m.p.h. She said they also want two stop lights — one at Aptakisic Road and the other at the intersection of Elmhurst and McHenry roads.

The state recently reduced speeds along a section of the roadway from 55 to 50 m.p.h. Mrs. Fredrickson said this reduction is not sufficient, adding that residents are particularly concerned about the safety of their children.

IN ADDITION TO asking drivers to travel McHenry Road at 35 m.p.h., Mrs. Fredrickson said the committee also plans to contact the state department of transportation about the problem. She said the committee's approach will be both "dramatic and legal."

Persons wishing to work towards reducing speeds along McHenry Road can contact any of the representatives on the interdevelopment committee.

Persons at Cedar Run may contact Mrs. Fredrickson at 541-1091 or Cathy Breier, 537-0158. At Fairway Greens, the representatives are Karen Williams, 541-5038, and Melinda Hankley, 537-4315.

The representative at Whippletree Village is Liz Curley, 541-9137, while the representative at Addolorata Village is Kurt Jajnech, 537-2900.

Payoff 'launderer' faces sentencing

The president of a Northbrook excavating firm is scheduled to be sentenced in U.S. District Court today for laundering a payoff extorted from a Wheeling developer by James Stavros in 1970.

Willis Clark, 58, of 218 S. Elm Rd., Palatine, pleaded guilty last month to filing a false corporate income tax return for Country Service and Supply Co., 3300 N. Milwaukee Ave. Clark overstated both the firm's gross revenue and expenses by $40,000.

He faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

According to previously filed court documents, the $40,000 was extorted from the Tekton Corp. by Stavros, a former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman.

In a bill of particulars filed along with an eight-count indictment against Stavros, the U.S. Attorney's Office charged that Tekton paid $40,000 to Country Service on Dec. 24, 1970. Later the same day, Clark issued two checks to Stavros totaling $38,500 drawn on his firm's account, according to the government.

JOEL LANENDELLA, Clark's attorney, said he has entered into evidence lie detector tests which show that his client had no knowledge of any extortion schemes involving Stavros.

These tests are expected to bolster defense arguments that Clark should be granted probation, since he did not defraud the government of any money and did not knowingly participate in any extortion scheme.

Clark is the seventh defendant charged as a result of a federal grand jury probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31 as a result of the probe. Four of the six, including Stavros, have pleaded guilty, and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

Police wrapup

Youths charged in 'adult' mag theft

Two men were arrested early Saturday for attempting to steal some "adult pictured" magazines from the Affiliated Book Distributors, Wheeling police said.

According to police a witness saw one of the men on the roof of the 415 N. Volf Rd. building and the other behind the building about 12:20 a.m. Saturday. After police arrived on the scene, they stopped a car that was seen leaving the building area and driving across an adjacent field.

Both occupants of the car were charged with attempted theft and will appear Aug. 6 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court. Arrested were Robert B. Torp Jr., 20, of 705 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling, and Martin R. Seymour, 21, of 908 Braeside Dr., Arlington Heights.

Police said they had written confessions from both men and that Seymour was the man on the roof. The pair did not steal any magazines, however, as they neither found any on the outside or a way into the building.

Three burglaries reported

Small amounts of cash were taken in two of three burglaries which occurred during the weekend in Wheeling.

An estimated $34 cash was stolen from a cash register at Carl's Texaco gasoline station, 1200 W. Dundee Rd., between 5 p.m. Saturday and 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Police said entry was gained when a window in the overhead garage door was broken.

Police added the burglar apparently overlooked $20 which was under the drawer in the cash register.

Some $10 in petty cash, costume jewelry and an air-conditioner were stolen Friday night during a burglary at the Second Chance store, 562 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Police said entry was gained after 8 p.m. Friday and before 10 a.m. Saturday, after the burglar had removed the air conditioner.

It is unknown what, if anything, was stolen in the third burglary, which occurred Friday night at the Robert W. Scheffel residence, 1430 Marcy Ln. Police said the kitchen door had been forced open.

Cyclists nabbed for dragging

Two Mundelein men were arrested early Saturday for drag racing their motorcycles on Milwaukee Avenue near Dundee Road, Wheeling police said.

Arrested were William L. Vaughan, 30, and Walter S. Wetterer, 30, both of whom posted $50 bond and their driver's licenses. They will appear Sept. 3 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

Police said the pair were traveling in excess of 70 m.p.h. in the 4:35 a.m. incident.

Incidents at MacArthur Pub

Wheeling police were called out twice in the past three days to quell disturbances at the MacArthur Park Pub, in the Lynn Plaza Shopping Center.

The first incident occurred at 3:17 a.m. Saturday. No details were available from police because no report was filed on the disturbance.

The second incident occurred at 12:40 a.m. Monday and allegedly involved two females who were fighting. Again there was no police report, as again the disturbance was "settled by officers."

Numerous brawls at the pub have been the subject of complaints to the Village of Wheeling. Most of the complaints come from other tenants of the shopping center, who fear their business is being adversely affected by the pub.

SUMMER SCHOOL IS NOW under way at Dwyer Education Cooperative. Officials of the program have come under investigation because of charges made by emotionally disturbed children run by the Northwest several present and former employees of the program.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT BAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Elmhurst Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Kelth Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans to leave teaching entirely.

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Also Monday, Edith Freund, president of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND SAID she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdice, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN SAID Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves,"

Whipple defends his conduct

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic."

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists

in the program working together, and, when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

Teachers in the program, whom Whipple calls "teacher-therapists," have either elementary school teacher certification or certification as learning disability teachers, he said. Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle." Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

When the tentative agreement is finalized, the PHEA membership and the board as a whole must vote to accept it before the contract can take effect.

Burglar ready for big beer, hot dog party

If anyone hears of a hastily called block party in his neighborhood, the Buffalo Grove police might want to hear about it.

Police said burglars stole 10 cases of beer, 15 pounds of hot dogs and a gallon each of mustard and relish Saturday night from the Buffalo Grove Golf Course, 400 Lake Cook Rd.

The party ingredients, valued at $58, were stored in an outside freezer locker behind the clubhouse. The burglary occurred between 11 p.m. Saturday and 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

A similar burglary, but one which may not have been connected with the golf course burglary, occurred early Friday at the Richard E. Nardella residence, 1020 Harvard Ln., Buffalo Grove, police said.

Between 1 and 5:30 a.m., while the Nardella family was asleep, a burglar broke into the basement and took five cases of beer, valued at $25, police said. The beer was stacked next to a basement window and visible from outside.

Cyclist's condition 'good' after crash

A 30-year-old Deerfield Manor man remained in good condition Monday at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines after an accident Friday near Wheeling.

Lou J. Hakmeister was admitted to the hospital with multiple head injuries.

Details of the accident were unavailable from Cook County Sheriff's police. However, it is known that Hakmeister was riding a motorcycle when the accident occurred Friday on Milwaukee Road near Lake Cook Road.

Cyclist, 12, injured when struck by car

A 12-year-old Buffalo Grove youth, struck by a car while riding a bicycle, was admitted to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines Monday afternoon.

A condition report on William Walthall, 1219 Elton Ct., was unavailable late Monday from the hospital; however, Wheeling police said the youth's condition was "bad."

The driver of the car, Angela K. Armstrong, 20, of 159 Downing Rd., Buffalo Grove, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident, police said. She will appear Aug. 20 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

The car and bicycle were southbound on Buffalo Grove Road in the area of Tahoe Village when the midday accident occurred.

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's purse over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

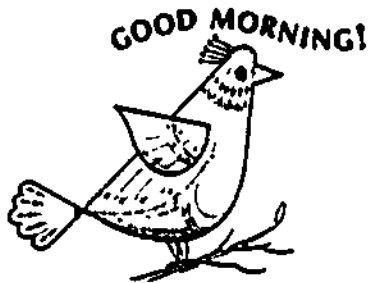

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Moles, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Moles aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

If cement truckers' strike ends this week

Paving of Dundee Road expected to resume soon

State officials predicted Monday that paving of Dundee Road will resume by the middle of next week if the strike by cement and material truck drivers ends this week, as expected.

Albert Sifrer, project engineer for the Illinois Division of Highways, said workers will be able to pave as soon as cement and other construction materials become available. He said if there are no further delays, all four lanes of Dundee Road should be completed this fall.

"Right now we think we're in pretty good shape," Sifrer said. "We're ready to go. All we need now are the materials."

Since the strike started two months ago, Sifrer said work crews have done a substantial amount of work to prepare for the resumption of paving. All of the fine grading is completed on two lanes, while a good portion of the sub base has been installed, Sifrer said.

AS SOON AS materials become available, workers should be able to finish installing the sub-base on one portion of the road while paving is being done on another section, he added.

The project consists of widening Dundee Road to four lanes between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53, through Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights. So far, two lanes have been installed from Elmhurst Road to about 300 feet west of Buffalo Grove Road.

After two lanes are paved, traffic will be shifted from the battered existing lanes to the new pavement. The old lanes will then be removed and two new lanes will be installed.

State officials said the road will be safer to travel on after two lanes are completed and traffic is shifted to the new pavement.

In addition to widening Dundee Road, the project consists of hooking up realignments of Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights roads where they intersect Dundee Road. Both roads are realigned to meet existing extensions north of Dundee Road.

OFFICIALS SAID THE realignments will reduce traffic congestion and reduce the number of accidents.

Finally, the $3 million project provides for replacing 900 feet of Arlington Heights Road, north of Dundee Road. That section of road has been in a state of disrepair for more than a year and is now closed to traffic.

Dundee Road has been under some type of construction since September, 1972. Road construction did not begin until last summer, but before that workers were installing new sewers.

Contractors hope to save 'season'

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 179, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; and Greco Contractors Inc. on several occasions because of the slow progress on the road. Late last year the village sent letters to Gov. Daniel Walker and various state legislators in an effort to expedite construction.

As a result, the state has designated Dundee Road as the top road construction priority in the northern part of Illinois.

State officials forbid Greco, 6110 N. River Road, Rosemont, from bidding on further state projects until they are satisfied with the firm's progress on Dundee Road.

Greco has claimed it is the "scapegoat" for the state and blamed the delays on weather, a cement shortage and now the strike.

Suspended Buffalo Grove patrolman Floyd Merenkov's hearing before the Fire and Police Commission will be continued to July 27.

The hearing was scheduled for Saturday, but will be continued because the commission's attorney is unable to attend, said Nick Tufano, a member of the commission. "The hearing will be brought to order this Saturday, but will

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

State officials forbid Greco, 6110 N. River Road, Rosemont, from bidding on further state projects until they are satisfied with the firm's progress on Dundee Road.

Greco has claimed it is the "scapegoat" for the state and blamed the delays on weather, a cement shortage and now the strike.

then be continued to the next week," Tufano said Monday.

Tufano confirmed reports of the continuance after Village Mgr. Daniel Larson and Police Chief Harry Walsh denied any knowledge of the change.

Larson and Walsh met for several hours Monday morning at an undisclosed location. After the meeting, Larson and Walsh refused to say what specifically was discussed at the meeting. "We talked about the general operations of the village and the police department in particular," Larson said.

Neither he nor Walsh would say if the current charges against Merenkov were discussed.

Walsh suspended Merenkov 11 days ago and asked for his dismissal by the fire and police commission. Merenkov is charged by Walsh with disobeying an order, insubordination and disrespect for a supervisor, taking action derogatory to the department and discrediting the force.

In turn, Merenkov, 27, charged that some sergeants on the department are guilty of theft and misconduct. He said he was suspended for attempting to bring the cases to Walsh's attention so corrective action could be taken.

His salary was ordered stopped by the commission and he is working for the fire department for $20 a day.

Ambulance call payments are on increase: Winter

The number of residents submitting payment for ambulance calls in Buffalo Grove increased substantially in recent weeks, Fire Chief Wayne Winter said Monday.

"I would say we are now receiving payment for close to 50 per cent of our ambulance calls," Winter said. "Until recently we were paid for only about 30 per cent of them."

Approximately two weeks ago, the fire department began sending out "past due notices" to residents who had not submitted payment for individual ambulance runs. Winter said at the time if more persons did not start paying bills, the department's paramedic program would be put in jeopardy because of a lack of money.

"The department always billed residents $30 for ambulance calls, but in the past never actively attempted to collect the fee," Winter said. The increased cost of running the paramedic program, he said, is the reason the department is seeking payment from every resident who uses the service.

SINCE THE "PAST due notices" were sent out, Winter said approximately 20 residents have submitted payment. "A lot of residents were confused and thought the payment was a donation. I think once they realize the money is needed to run the paramedic program, we will get payment from more residents," he said.

In the past, the program was financed primarily through donations, but Winter said that is no longer possible. Taxes collected for fire protection cannot be used for ambulance calls, he said, so the money must come from other sources.

Winter said the only way an ambulance tax will be collected is if a large majority of residents begin paying for ambulance calls.

"It's too soon to tell how successful we'll be in collecting payment," Winter said. "We'll know a lot more in about six months."

If all residents pay for their ambulance runs this year, he predicts, the fire department could receive an additional $14,000 in revenue.

WINTER SAID residents are billed $30, but the actual expense of each ambulance run is about $60.

Within a few weeks the department will require residents to sign a form agreeing to pay the cost of transporting a patient to the hospital. Winter said the department will ask a relative of the sick or injured person to sign the form before transporting the patient to the hospital.

Winter emphasized, however, that the department would transport the patient in the event no relatives are present.

In most cases, he said, there is no reason for residents not to pay the bill because most have insurance that covers such expenses.

Burglar ready for big beer, hot dog party

If anyone hears of a hastily called block party in his neighborhood, the Buffalo Grove police might want to hear about it.

Police said burglars stole 10 cases of beer, 15 pounds of hot dogs and a gallon each of mustard and relish Saturday night from the Buffalo Grove Golf Course, 400 Lake Cook Rd.

The party ingredients, valued at $58, were stored in an outside freezer locker behind the clubhouse. The burglary occurred between 11 p.m. Saturday and 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

A similar burglary, but one which may not have been connected with the golf course burglary, occurred early Friday at the Richard E. Nardella residence, 1020 Harvard Ln., Buffalo Grove, police said.

Between 1 and 5:30 a.m., while the Nardella family was asleep, a burglar broke into the basement and took five cases of beer, valued at $25, police said. The beer was stacked next to a basement window and visible from outside.

McHenry Road residents plan speed-limit campaign

Wheeling residents from developments along McHenry Road are organizing a campaign to get drivers to travel at 33 m.p.h. along that street.

Since the state sets its speed limits according to the speeds that drivers travel, the residents hope to be able to get them to travel slower.

The campaign grew out of a mass rally by residents last week, which was called to organize for lower speed limits along McHenry Road.

WHEELING RESIDENTS have been complaining about the McHenry Road traffic ever since the area began to attract apartment and townhouse projects. Three persons have been killed in fatal auto accidents on that stretch of road during the last year.

The residents formed an "inter-development committee" designed to organize the 35-mile-per-hour campaign and other efforts to get the speed limits reduced.

Cyndi Fredrickson, acting secretary of the Cedar Run Homeowners Assn., said the group plans to push for a reduction of speed limits from 50 m.p.h. to 40 m.p.h. She said they also want two stop lights — one at Aptakisic Road and the other at the intersection of Elmhurst and McHenry roads.

The state recently reduced speeds along a section of the roadway from 55 to 50 m.p.h. Mrs. Fredrickson said this reduction is not sufficient, adding that residents are particularly concerned about the safety of their children.

IN ADDITION TO asking drivers to travel McHenry Road at 33 m.p.h., Mrs. Fredrickson said the committee also plans to contact the state department of transportation about the problem. She said the committee's approach will be both "dramatic and legal."

Persons wishing to work towards reducing speeds along McHenry Road can contact any of the representatives on the inter-development committee.

Persons at Cedar Run may contact Mrs. Fredrickson at 541-1091 or Cathy Breier, 537-0158. At Fairway Greens, the representatives are Karen Williams, 541-5038, and Melinda Hankley, 537-4318.

The representative at Whippotree Village is Liz Curley, 541-9137, while the representative at Addolorata Village is Kurt Joinech, 537-2900.

which includes the issuing of grand jury subpoenas "to see if there is any substance to the charges."

Neither McDonough nor Monoson would elaborate on the nature of the charges made against Hein, Metzger and others.

Hein, however, has been repeatedly accused of conflict of interest for voting on the village purchase of auto parts equipment from the firm for which he works.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT BAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Elmhurst Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Keith Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans to leave teaching entirely.

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Also Monday, Edith Freund, president of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND SAID she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdice, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic."

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists

was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN SAID Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle."

Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

MONOSON SAID he went to the state's attorney to help further investigations into official Wheeling corruption that began with a federal grand jury probe last year. Six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31 as a result of that probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers.

Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

Storm debris may remain for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS said a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the Arlington Market, Kensington Road and Dryden Place, lost its power until approximately 7 p.m.

Stephens said nearly 700 persons were affected by blackouts near Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street, and Lincoln and Busse Road in Mount Prospect.

"The big problem was trees," Stephens said. "We had branches on wires. We couldn't do much until the trees were cleared, and trying to get tree contractors on a Sunday is another matter."

He said both independent contractors and Edison employees removed fallen branches from the wires.

STEPHENS ALSO said towns outside of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, and Palatine also had power interruptions, which he described as "simpler in nature and pretty well scattered."

He said the company received more than 1,000 calls during the course of the blackouts, and sent out 30 crews to make repairs.

He said the company called in crews from Northbrook and Waukegan to assist.

Cyclist, 12, injured when struck by car

A 12-year-old Buffalo Grove youth, struck by a car while riding a bicycle, was admitted to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines Monday afternoon.

A condition report on William Walthall, 1219 Eton Ct., was unavailable late Monday from the hospital; however, Wheeling police said the youth's condition was "bad."

The driver of the car, Angela K. Armstrong, 20, of 159 Downing Rd., Buffalo Grove, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident, police said. She will appear Aug. 20 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

State's attorney investigates Wheeling officials

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Trustee William Hein and Plan Comr. Jack Metzger are the object of a State's Attorney's investigation into conflict of interest and secret land trusts, The Herald has learned.

Plan Comr. Gilbert Monoson began the probe last week when he presented information to the State's Attorney's Office about possible conflicts of interest involving Wheeling officials.

Asst. State's Atty. Thomas McDonough said the complaints made by Monoson will be followed up by normal procedure, more than $13,000 worth of auto parts equipment in the 1972-73 fiscal year. Gordon H. Hein, the trustee's father, is listed as president of that company.

Hein also has voted on purchases from B. C. Auto Parts, Inc. of Mundelein. Gordon P. Hein, the trustee's brother, is listed on state records as president of that company.

Metzger, a salesman for Diamond Outdoor Sign Co., was recently challenged for voting on projects proposed by developers to whom he sells billboards. Last month he abstained from voting on changes in the Harmony Village project after a resident charged that Metzger's firm had contracts for billboards at the project.

Hein said he has no knowledge of any investigation and charged that the matter is "purely political." He said an investigation will turn up no wrongdoings on his part. Metzger was unavailable for comment.

The investigation also reportedly involves secret land trusts which may include Hein, Metzger and other village officials as beneficiaries for property that has received favorable rezoning by the village.

MONOSON SAID he went to the state's attorney to help further investigations into official Wheeling corruption that began with a federal grand jury probe last year. Six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted Jan. 31 as a result of that probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

Gunman captured after taking hostage in drug robbery

by JOE SWICKARD
A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Mols, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Mols aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

Ball then broke and ran. As he jumped

Future of bus program is now in village hands

by JERRY THOMAS
Elk Grove Village officials must decide in the next few weeks if they will continue a village bus transportation program, where the money to operate it will come from and just how much financial help from the village it will receive.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the transportation committee, said the village's six-month trial bus service contract with Davidsmeyer Bus Transportation Co. of Elk Grove village will end Aug. 31.

She plans to call a committee meeting of board members next week to discuss long range plans for the transportation program she believes was used well by residents.

At the last transportation committee meeting, members were considering using two buses for summer dial-a-ride service adding a special Woodfield Shopping Center run and expanding the service to the village industrial area.

During its first week of operation, demand for in-town service was so great that officials expanded it.

Extra telephone lines were installed to handle calls and rider demand. By May the dial-a-ride service was hauling 1,632 passengers a month. That same month a Saturday dial-a-ride service was instituted.

During the month of June, 1,671 passengers opted for the 25-cent a ride bus service which averaged 67 riders a day.

The dial-a-ride service operates between 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day except Sunday. A commuter bus takes Elk Grove Village residents to and from the Chicago and North Western Ry. train station in Arlington Heights week days.

Most residents complimented the bus service and asked for more buses, Mrs. Vanderweel said.

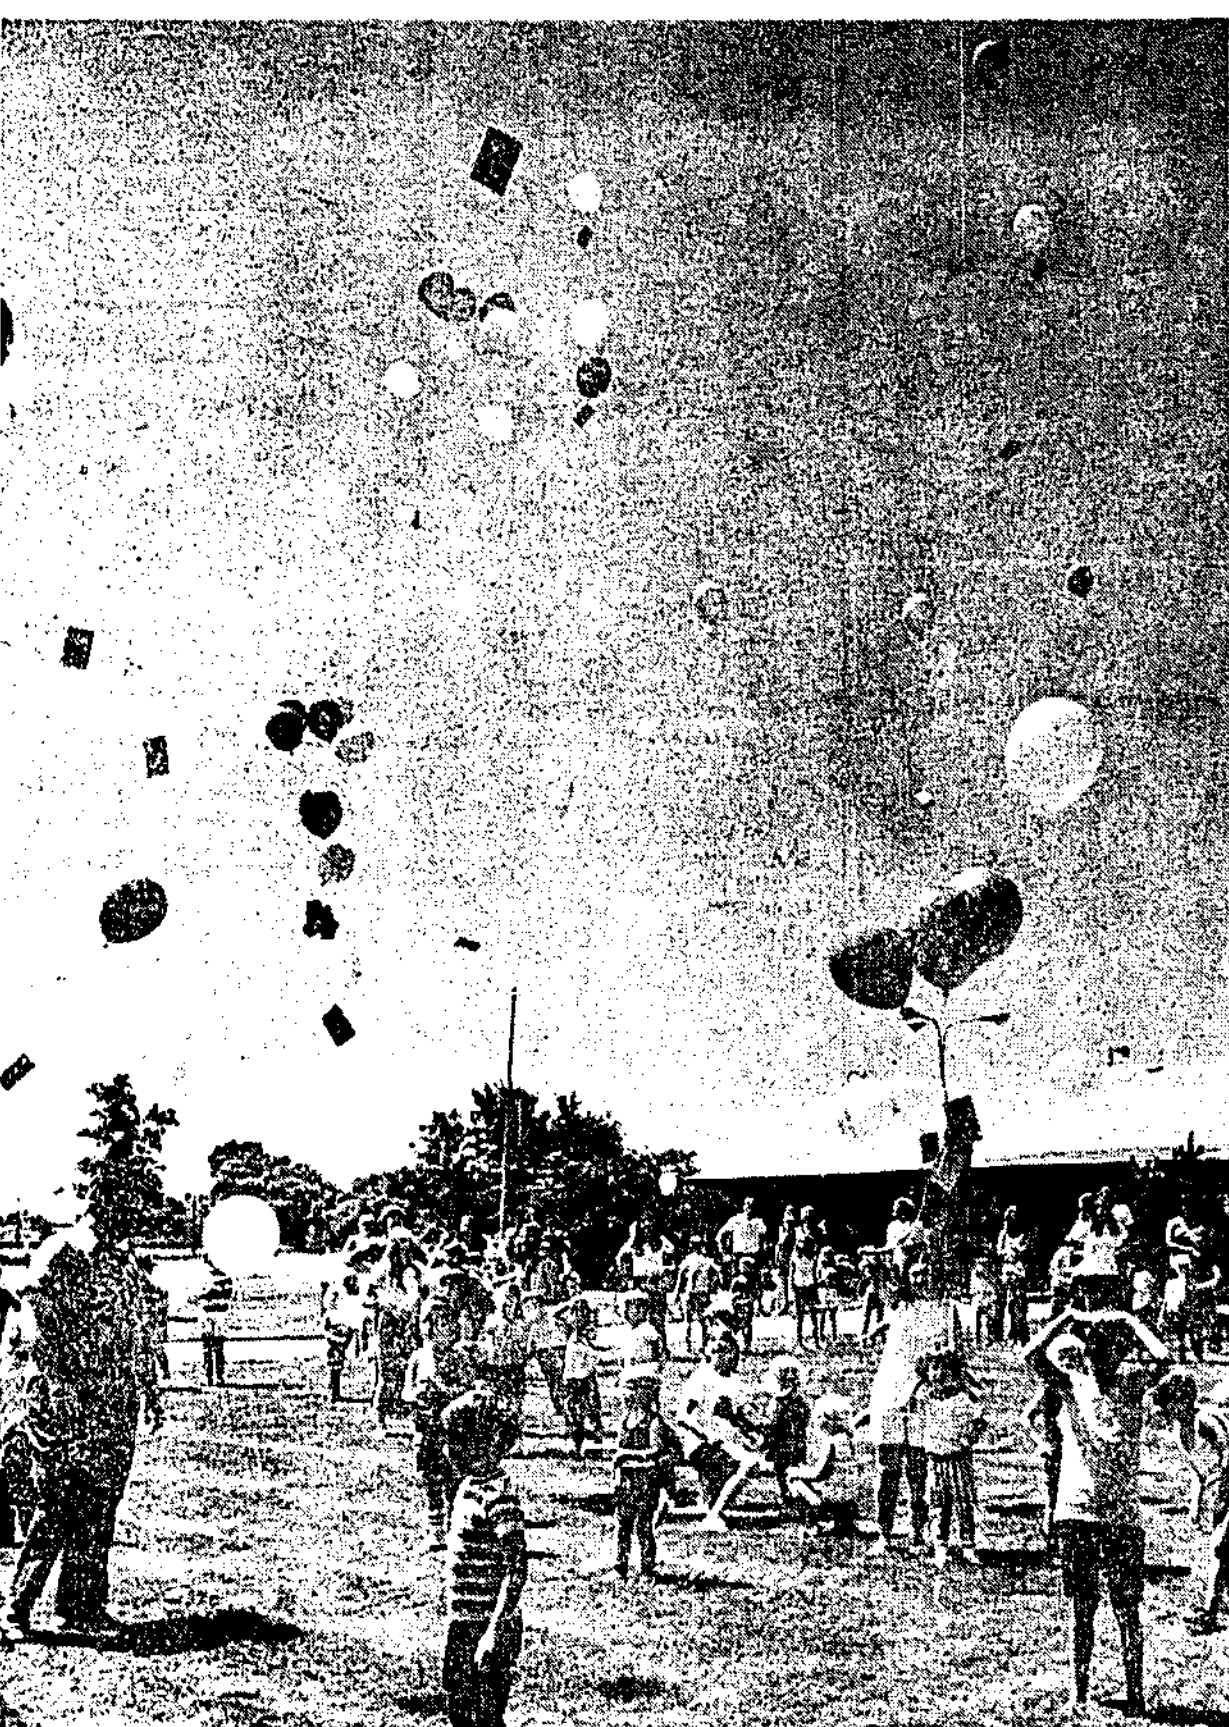

"However, village merchants became miffed during June when we first started talking about a Woodfield bus. They complained it would take money out of the village," she added.

"The transportation committee has not decided if a Woodfield run will be instituted during the remainder of the trial contract," she said.

Riders pay the 25-cents a ride fare in town and can purchase monthly $15 subscription tickets for the commuter service.

"This hardly pays for a driver," said Mrs. Vanderweel. The village had allocated $30,000 of its federal revenue sharing funds for subsidizing the service.

Exact monthly cost varies with use. The village pays $4.50 an hour for both services plus 50 cents a mile for the commuter service and 45 cents a mile for the dial-a-ride service.

200 balloons off for points unknown

About 200 helium-filled balloons sailed away from Lions Park, 180 Kennedy Blvd., Saturday morning, headed for places unknown. The farthest any balloons have gone in the four years the Elk Grove Park District has been sponsoring the contest is Detroit.

Each balloon left Lions Park with a card attached bearing the sender's name and address. The two cards returned from the farthest places by Aug. 8 will name the winners, who can ride in a private plane over the Elk Grove area. Anyone else whose card is returned may go on a glider ride. Winners will be announced at the annual playground carnival Aug. 9.

The contest was open to 3 to 13-year-olds, and most of the 150 participants were younger children, Kathy Franke of the park district said. Turnout was a little lower than usual, probably because of the heat, vacations or a lack of interest, she said. There are fewer young children in the village and therefore fewer children to become interested, she said.

THE GIFT OF LIFE

ELK GROVE VILLAGE COMMUNITY
4% BLOOD ASSURANCE PROGRAM

Annual Goal: 900 units
Already donated: 520
Still needed: 380

One hundred and eighty-two units of blood were donated by Elk Grove residents last week to credit the village's 4 per cent blood replacement program.

Persons who wish to donate blood may do so now by contacting Alexian Brothers Medical Center at 437-5500 for an appointment.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the blood program, may be contacted at the village hall at 439-3900 for further information.

Bulldozer covers cistern; parents not worried now

An Elk Grove Village bulldozer eased the concern of a lot of parents Friday.

The bulldozer covered over an open cistern on an abandoned farm near Elk Grove Village.

"Maybe it doesn't sound like much, but to my neighbors and me it was a fantastic action that eased our fears greatly," said Mrs. John Burton, 1413 Mitchell Ter.

She and her neighbors were afraid a child might fall into the cistern and drown. They made dozens of calls to see whose responsibility it was to fill the cistern in.

"IT TOOK MONTHS of being put off by the county. But when we got through to an Elk Grove Village official, we got immediate help," Mrs. Burton said.

Parkway Developers of Chicago, owners of the property, contacted Mrs. Burton Monday and assured her the cistern would be covered immediately. "They agreed it was a dangerous situation and said they were unaware of the fact until the county contacted them," she said.

"When I told them it was taken care of, they were surprised and said they would send someone to check it out and make sure the job was done. They assured me they thought the old farm site was leveled safely months ago," she said.

MRS. BURTON said an old well on the property, a favorite play spot for youngsters living on nearby Mitchell Trail, had been filled in when the old buildings were destroyed. But the cistern was probably missed by wrecking crews. The property lies in an unincorporated area of Schaumburg Township.

"I guess the best call I made was to The Herald because the day the story appeared things started happening and now the cistern is covered over and the danger is past," she said.

HUNDREDS OF balloons sail off to who-knows-where, District Saturday. The two balloons going to the farthest at a balloon contest sponsored by the Elk Grove Park places will win their senders a plane ride.

Cement drivers' strike near settlement

Contractors seek to salvage season

by MARCIA KRAMER
Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 179, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; 673, Wheaton; 705, Maywood; and 786, Chicago.

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs

also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilks Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

Bagpipers to perform

The Shannon Rovers bagpipe group will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Grant Wood School.

The free concert, one in a series sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District, will be held in the parking lot area near the school, 225 E. Elk Grove Blvd. If it rains, the concert will be inside.

New boundaries approved at Jay, Forest View schools

A few Mount Prospect children may have a safer way to get to school in the fall.

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education Monday night unanimously approved a boundary change for John Jay and Forest View schools, both in Mount Prospect.

This change would affect fewer than 25 current students, Supt. James Ervitt said.

The change involved putting a parcel of land now within the Jay boundaries into the Forest View boundaries.

The land is north of Ill. Rte. 62, south of Golf Road, east of Arlington Heights Road and west of Goebbert Road.

PARENTS OF STUDENTS living in that area had been concerned about their children having to cross busy Goebbert Road to get to Jay School.

If the children from that area go to Forest View School they would be bused. A bus for Forest View already picks up children from single-family homes near that area.

Students from the region who now go to Jay School, and their younger brothers and sisters, may continue there.

However, any new family moving into the area would be assigned to Forest View.

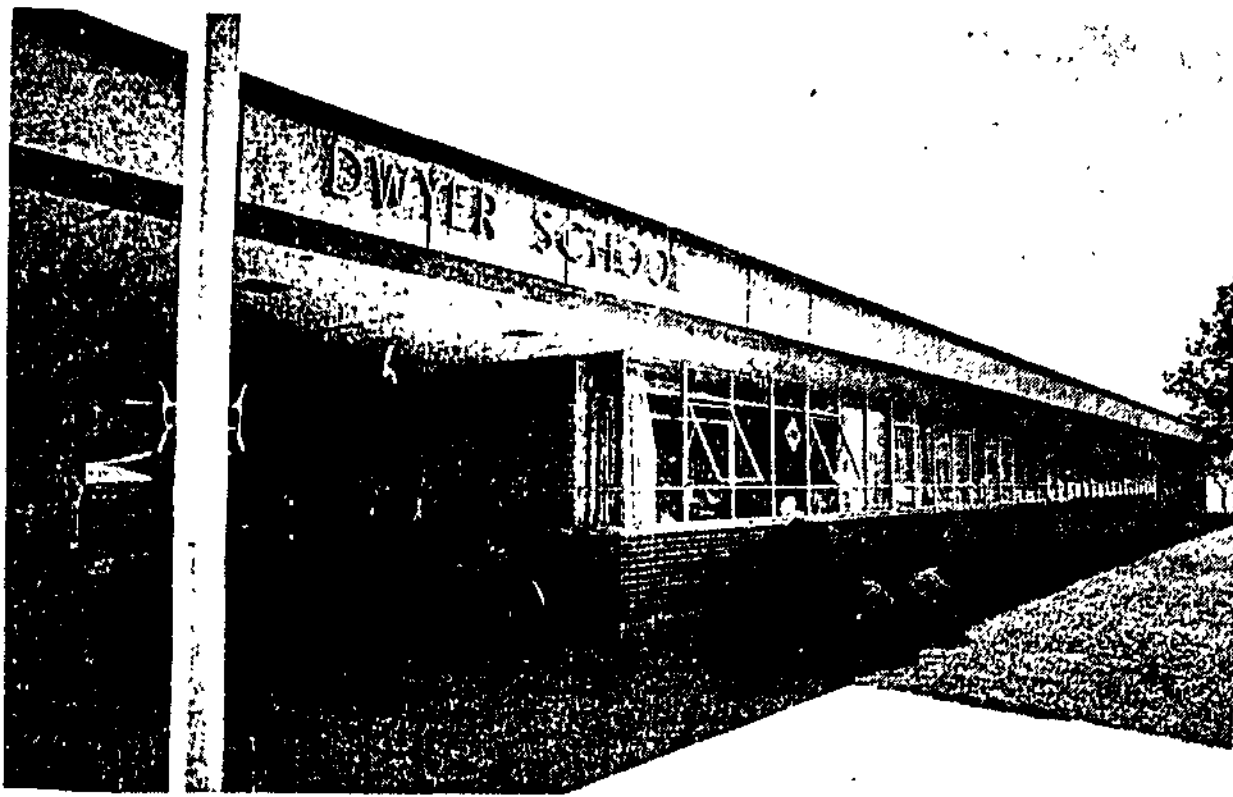

Few children would be affected by this new change because most of the people living in that area are in apartments and have signed leases forbidding children, Ervitt said.

In other action, the board approved putting a copy of its tentative budget on display for public examination beginning 9 a.m. today. The budget will be displayed at the Dist. 59 business office, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

THE RACE IS ON as boys 13 and up plunge into a freestyle swim relay. Freestyle, backstroke and other skills were matched Friday, as novice teams from the two Elk Grove Village pools, Disney and all ages competed, and Lions Pool won the meet 126 to 89.

SUMMER SCHOOL IS NOW under way at Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, site of a program for emotionally disturbed children run by the Northwest

Education Cooperative. Officials of the program have come under investigation because of charges made by several present and former employees of the program.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT DAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Elmhurst Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Kelth Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans to leave teaching entirely.

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Also Monday, Edith Freund, president of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND SAID she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdecia, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aside, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own ex-

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic."

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists in the program working together, and, when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

perience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN SAID Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle." Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

John Whipple

Teachers in the program, whom Whipple calls "teacher-therapists," have either elementary school teacher certification or certification as learning disability teachers, he said. Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Lions Club lists 4th prizewinners

Ed McIlale, 591 Exmoor, Elk Grove Village, is the new owner of a Chevrolet Vega as grand prize winner at the annual July 4th celebration and carnival sponsored by the Lions Club.

Other prize winners were Scott Carlson of 941 W. Higgins, Elk Grove Village, who won a motorcycle and A. Brockman of 531 Clearmont, Elk Grove Village, who won a television set.

Schwinn bicycles donated by Village Realty, Ruth Helbrig and Gallery of Homes were won by Tom Yohe, Ken Herro, Tom Steinbeck and Ken Gifford.

The Lions Clubs support the Hadley School for the Blind and Lions Camp, a summer camp for blind children.

The annual July 4th carnival is one of the fund-raising events held by the Lions Club to support their local and national projects.

Local activities have included the planning, developing and ultimate donation of Lions Pool and Park to the park district.

Registration opens Saturday for boys' football program

Registration begins Saturday for the Elk Grove Park District's boys' football program.

Boys between 8 and 13 can sign up for the community or traveling leagues, at the Lions Park Community Center, 180 Kennedy Blvd.

If enough boys register, there will be two community divisions, one for 8-and 9-year olds and one for 10-through 12-year-olds. Older boys can register for the traveling teams, which as members of the Fox Valley League, will play teams from other towns.

Fees are $25 for the first boy in a family and $15 for any of his brothers who register. The season starts Aug. 1 but registration will be taken through August.

This is the eighth year for the competitive football program. About 200 boys participate yearly, and 125 have registered.

Coaches have been selected for the three traveling league teams. For the Chiefs, coaches are Ron Bernadini, Len Novack, Bob Whitesell and John Schwartz. Dolphins coaches are Art Schmalz, John Bria, Bill Cox and John Yohe. Coaches for the Warriors are Frank Clangi, Tom Bessey, Dale Tori, Rich Mitchell and Al Crivellaro.

Consumer fraud unit open in Des Plaines

The Consumer Fraud and Protection Division of the Illinois Attorney General's office is operating a branch office in Des Plaines.

The office is open from 9 a.m. until noon every Saturday, operating from the offices of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce, 800 Lee St.

Residents wishing to file complaints may visit the office or call 824-4200.

Stevenson site report due

The site for Adlai E. Stevenson Elementary School in Elk Grove Village should be prepared by the end of the month, according to a Centex Construction Co. spokesman.

Construction of the school on Nerge Road east of Meacham Road had been delayed because Centex had not removed a stockpile of black dirt on the site or graded the land. This was to be completed by July 1.

Centex had agreed to remove the dirt and grade the site when it donated the land to Schaumburg Township Dist. 54.

The company was delayed in removing the dirt because of the wet spring. However, the site will be cleared, graded and the pad for the foundation constructed by the end of the month.

School officials were concerned that the delayed construction would prevent the school from being completed by September, 1975. If the school is not completed by that date, double shifts may be necessary at Link School, 900 S. West Glenn Ter., Elk Grove Village, or the students intended for Stevenson would have to be bused to other schools in the district.

Gunman captured after taking hostage in drug robbery

by JOE SWICKARD
A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

ton Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

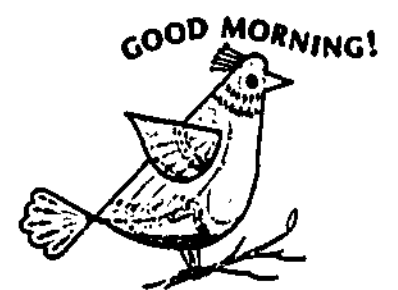

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Mols, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Mols aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

Ball then broke and ran. As he jumped

Two banks donate land for park in downtown area

A new park will open in downtown Palatine in August on land donated by the two local banks as an initial step toward the redevelopment of the downtown area.

The park will be located on the northwest corner of Brockway and Slade streets. The former Palatine National Bank building and charred remains of the Ben Franklin Store were razed in March to make way for the park.

The 3,000 square-foot parcel was jointly donated by the Palatine National Bank and the First Bank and Trust Co. Development plans for the park, which will be used for passive recreation, have been donated by William Blue Vaughn, a Palatine landscape architect.

The park is designed on three levels and is described by Vaughn as "rustic and rugged." Facilities at the park will include benches, a donated fountain with cascading water, multi-season plants and an open area for school groups or local garden clubs to use for growing plants.

VOLUNTARY MANPOWER to plant trees and shrubs and install benches in the park will be provided by the Palatine Jaycees. Park construction will get under way when railroad ties, which will be used as steps for the three levels, become available.

"The new park is an excellent example of how community-oriented businesses and civic organizations can cooperate to improve a commercial area," said Lee E. Morrison president of Palatine National Bank in a prepared statement. "This centrally-located park will add to the esthetic quality of the village with its spot-of-green downtown. And it will be a pleasant place for people to rest and enjoy the various plants growing there."

Morrison is chairman of the New Palatine Committee, a group of downtown businessmen and landowners who recently submitted formal recommendations to the village for redeveloping the downtown area.

"The new park facility ties in perfectly with the New Palatine Committee's recommended program to add cultural and recreational facilities to the downtown area in addition to stimulating business growth and redevelopment," said Morrison.

Officials of the program have come under investigation because of charges made by several present and former employees of the program.

Storm debris may remain for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS said a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the Arlington Market, Kensington Road and Dryden Place, lost its power until approximately 7 p.m.

Stephens said nearly 700 persons were affected by blackouts near Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street, and Lincoln and Busse Road in Mount Prospect.

"The big problem was trees," Stephens said. "We had branches on wires. We couldn't do much until the trees were cleared, and trying to get tree contractors on a Sunday is another matter."

He said both independent contractors and Edison employees removed fallen branches from the wires.

STEPHENS ALSO said towns outside of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, and Palatine also had power interruptions, which he described as "simpler in nature and pretty well scattered."

He said the company received more than 1,000 calls during the course of the blackouts, and sent out 30 crews to make repairs.

He said the company called in crews from Northbrook and Waukegan to assist.

Exec faces sentencing for 'laundering' payoff

The president of a Northbrook excavating firm is scheduled to be sentenced in U.S. District Court today for laundering a payoff extorted from a Wheeling developer by James Stavros in 1970.

Willis Clark, 39, of 218 S. Elm Rd., Palatine, pleaded guilty last month to filing a false corporate income tax return for Country Service and Supply Co., 3300 N. Milwaukee Ave. Clark overstated both the firm's gross revenue and expenses by $40,000.

He faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

According to previously filed court documents, the $40,000 was extorted from the Tekton Corp. by Stavros, a former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman.

In a bill of particulars filed along with an eight-count indictment against Stavros, the U.S. Attorney's Office charged that Tekton paid $40,000 to Coun-

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with my colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Morris named drug education advisor

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has appointed Ralph W. Morris, 901 Arrowhead Dr., Palatine, as his drug education advisor.

Morris, a professor of pharmacology for the University of Illinois at the Medical Center, will work with Police Chief Jerry Bratcher and Jones to improve the drug abuse education program in Palatine.

"A two-pronged approach of enforcement and education is necessary in Palatine," Bratcher said. "We have improved our enforcement program greatly during the past 12 months and Morris' appointment will help us improve the education program in the community."

Morris will be available to the police department and village board for consultation regarding drug abuse.

Cement drivers' strike near settlement

Contractors seek to salvage season

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 178, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; 673, Wheaton; 705, Maywood; and 786, Chicago.

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

Village and rural park districts to discuss merger

The Palatine Park District and the Palatine Rural Park District will meet Tuesday to discuss a possible merger next year.

The meeting will take place at the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 1190 Hicks Rd., Palatine, at 7 p.m.

This will be the first formal discussion between the two park districts concerning the possible April 1, 1975, merger.

The target date for the merger was set to coincide with the beginning of both park districts' 1975 fiscal years.

THE IDEA OF a merger arose when the village announced possible annexations of three northern subdivisions and several major businesses along Northwest Highway in March. Annexation of the three subdivisions, Peppertree, Heatherlea and English Valley, would allow for the subdivisions to fall into the Palatine Park District. The three subdivisions are in the rural park district. Annexation of these areas would involve a major portion of the rural park district's population.

Although the effect of such a merger on homeowners in both districts cannot yet be determined, it is initially expected to lower taxes in the Palatine Park District and increase the 14½ cent per $100 valuation rate in the rural park district.

Palatine Park District has an assessed valuation of more than $100 million, which would combine with the $68 million assessed valuation of the rural park district in a merger. If the merger is approved, the new park district would include most homeowners in the village and unincorporated areas.

Commissioners of the two park boards can effect a merger by each board approving an ordinance by two-thirds majority vote.

of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND said she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdecia, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN said Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle." Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

Centner findings coming soon

The Palatine Police and Fire Commission has concluded its investigation of charges made against Robert Centner, former police chief, and is expected to make the findings public within the next two weeks.

Members of the commission have been reviewing more than 2,000 pages of testimony from the five-month series of hearings on the charges against Centner, in addition to recommendations from the attorney for Centner and the village.

Centner was forced to resign by the village board on June 23, 1973. The board said Centner lacked effective administrative abilities, conducted poor drug control programs, and failed to enforce restrictions on overweight trucks.

Since his resignation, Centner has served as a lieutenant on the police force. Former Rochelle, Ill., police chief, Jerry Bratcher, has been Palatine's police chief since January.

After discussing the charges in closed meetings June 28, July 4 and 9, the commission has turned its findings over to the village attorney, William L. Littlejohn, for review.

Copies of the findings will be made available to members of the Palatine Village Board, and representing attorneys after Littlejohn has completed his review and has transcribed the commission's findings into legal wording.

Paul Jung, chairman of the commission, explained that the commission was appointed by the village board to review the charges and make recommendations on them to the board. The actual agreement or disagreement with the charges

Park district offers skysailing classes

A second set of Palatine Park District skysailing classes will begin Wednesday, July 24, at 7 p.m. at Community Park, 262 E. Palatine Rd.

The courses include a two-hour ground lesson and two flight lessons at Warren Dunes State Park. The course fee is $35 and can be paid at the park district administration office at Community Park.

Chicago theater trip planned for children

A children's theater trip to see "The Popcorn Man" will be sponsored by the Palatine Park District Saturday, Aug. 3.

The bus will depart for Chicago's Goodman Theatre from Community Park, 262 E. Palatine Rd., at 1 p.m., and will return at 4:15 p.m.

The cost of the trip is $2.50 per person. Children 6 and under must be accompanied by an adult. Trip registration can be made at the park district administration office at Community Park.

YMCA to hike annual fees to meet costs

The Buehler YMCA in Palatine has increased its annual program fees this month to meet the operating costs of its new center.

The new fitness and recreation center, on Northwest Highway and Countryside Drive, has been open since October, 1973. Youths, ages 8 to 17, are now required to pay $35 a year compared to the former $30 a year program fee. The adult program fee, for persons 18 years old or older, has increased from $45 to $55 a year. The family enrollment program fee, which includes both parents and all children under 17 years of age, has increased from $75 to $85 a year.

Also, the price for a single fitness center enrollment, which also includes use by additional family members, has increased from $190 to $200. The enrollment of two in the fitness center has increased from $320 to $330 a year.

Gunman captured after taking hostage in drug robbery

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was uninjured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Mols, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Mols aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

Ball then broke and ran. As he jumped

Work may begin again on branch of New Wilke Rd.

The anticipated settlement this week of the two-month-old cement truck drivers strike in the Chicago area could mean the resumption soon of work on the major New Wilke Road extension in Rolling Meadows.

The $1 million road project, which calls for the extension of New Wilke from Algonquin Road south to Golf Road, is one of numerous road and construction projects virtually shut down by the marathon strike.

A spokesman for the Arrow Road Construction Co., Mount Prospect, which has been contracted to perform the work, said Monday the project could resume by the end of the month if the strike is settled this week.

Approximately 3,000 members of Local 788 of the Teamsters Union and other area locals are expected to vote sometime this week on a new three-year contract package which reportedly includes salary and fringe benefit increases which would bring drivers' salaries to $10.50 per hour.

THE STRIKE, which began May 15, halted almost immediately the New Wilke Road project which began April 18. A spokesman for the Cook County Highway Department said Monday the project had been planned for completion next month before the strike intervened.

"We're more anxious than anyone to get it done," Francine Stewart of the highway department said Monday. A spokesman for Arrow Road said settlement of the strike this week might mean the company can resume work by the week of July 29. Preliminary sewer and pipe connection work must be completed before pavement work can begin, the spokesman said.

"If we can get started the week of the 29th or even maybe the first week in August, we should be finished by Thanksgiving, barring too much rain or bad weather," the spokesman added.

The company was awarded the work contract in November when it submitted a low bid of $248,072 for the project. But like other road projects, including the extension of Euclid Avenue west from

Plum Grove Road to Roselle Road, the strike has prevented work in the construction trades during their peak season.

The Wilke Road project is part of a long-term plan to establish the road as a major north-south traffic artery for the area. Plans call for the four-lane road to be extended south from Algonquin Road, where it now ends, to Golf Road. Intersections at Algonquin and New Wilke and Golf and New Wilke will receive traffic signals.

The third phase of the New Wilke Road project calls for the extension of the road from Central Road north to Kirchoff Road in Rolling Meadows.

THE EFFECTS of the strike have not been as severe on major building construction in the city as on road work. Most major projects have not been hampered greatly by the strike, their spokesmen say.

Robert Kodl of the Plum Grove Bank under construction on Algonquin Road near Wilke Road said Monday the strike has caused only "minor irritations" and that the bank is still scheduled to open by mid-August. "We haven't been slowed up to date. So far we are still on schedule."

A spokesman for the Python office complex under construction on Algonquin Road near Ill. Rte. 63 said cement work for the second phase of development currently under way was completed before the strike started. Delays in the project have resulted, however, because of difficulty in obtaining steel, he said. "We were held up one month to six weeks in getting steel," but the spokesman added completion of the second building is still planned for January, 1975.

Work at the Gould Center on Golf Road near the Northwest Tollway has not been significantly hampered, a spokesman said Monday. Construction on the center's Picasso artwork, "The Bather," is scheduled to begin in the fall.

SUMMER SCHOOL IS NOW under way at Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, site of a program for emotionally disturbed children run by the Northwest Education Cooperative. Officials of the program have come under investigation because of charges made by several present and former employees of the program.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT BAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Butte Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Keith Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans to leave teaching entirely.

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Also Monday, Edith Freund, president

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic."

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists in the program working together, and, when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

Teachers in the program, whom Whipple calls "teacher-therapists," have other elementary school teacher certification or certification as learning disability teachers, he said. Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Storm debris may remain for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS SAID a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the Arlington Market, Kensington Road and Dryden Place, lost its power until approximately 7 p.m.

Stephens said nearly 700 persons were affected by blackouts near Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street, and Lincoln and Busse Road in Mount Prospect.

Report sought on Grove Utility

A report on the condition of the Grove Estates Utility Co. will be requested by Rolling Meadows officials from the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

The report, required to be filed quarterly each year with MSD, is being sought to determine if problem areas exist in the system which serves the Philippe subdivision in the northwest part of the city.

The 60-acre subdivision was annexed to the city last month, but the utility company which serves it remains under the ownership of John Philippe.

The request for the report was prompted by a meeting last week between homeowners in the subdivision and the city's public works department.

The homeowners, some of whom have septic systems rather than sewer systems, asked that the city inspect the sewer system.

The public works officials committee, however, last night recommended that the MSD inspection report be requested first and also that it be forwarded to residents in the subdivision.

The sewer system has been a source of concern to residents in the area because it is independently owned and was not taken over by the city in the annexation last month.

Residents with the septic systems also have been concerned about whether they will be required by the city to switch to the sewer system.

YMCA to hike annual fees to meet costs

The Buchler YMCA in Palatine has increased its annual program fees this month to meet the operating costs of its new center.

The new fitness and recreation center, on Northwest Highway and Countryside Drive, has been open since October, 1973.

Youths, ages 8 to 17, are now required to pay $33 a year compared to the former $30 a year program fee. The adult program fee, for persons 18 years old or older, has increased from $45 to $55 a year. The family enrollment program fee, which includes both parents and all children under 17 years of age, has increased from $75 to $85 a year.

Also, the price for a single fitness center enrollment, which also includes use by additional family members, has increased from $190 to $200. The enrollment of two in the fitness center has increased from $320 to $330 a year.

Contractors seek to salvage season

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 179, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; 673, Wheaton; 705, Maywood; and 786, Chicago.

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs

also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook P.J., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

District in joint program

Dist. 15 will participate in the joint service program and in the Illinois Assn. of School Boards for the coming school year.

The board approved a payment of $300 to the joint service program and a payment of $1,803 to the school board association last week.

Under the joint service program, 92 school districts pay a varied amount of money into a general fund, used to handle litigation for tax objections filed against the school district.

of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND said she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday—I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdice, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN said Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle." Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was uninjured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Moles, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Moles aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

Ball then broke and ran. As he jumped

Park work rolling

Residents seeing results of $675,000 referendum approved two years ago

by STIRLING MORITA

It has been a little more than two years since passage of a $675,000 Hoffman Estates Park Improvements referendum, and local residents are seeing what they voted for start to take firm root.

With the exception of major construction at High Point and Winston Knolls School parks, development at other sites is nearly completed. Park district officials are planning to tour six of the finished parks within several weeks, said Allen Binder, park district director.

Many of the sites where work is done are park-school or neighborhood parks. The only work needed on some of the sites are minor improvements and making sure a good turf is established.

Completion of the referendum package had been scheduled for various times last year, but was delayed because of problems ranging from unexpected drainage situations to poor weather.

Local voters approved the referendum in June, 1972. Including interest accrued, the total money accumulated through sales of park bonds has been estimated at about $723,400. However, anticipated expenditures to complete the package is near $790,000.

PARK OFFICIALS hope to make up about $30,000 by using a landscaper they fired for not completing his contract. The $30,000 is the estimated extra costs for hiring two other firms to finish projects at various sites.

Most of the cost overrun on the project can be attributed to development at High Point Park, the largest parcel owned by the district. Binder said cost overruns on the 35-acre site have amounted to about $120,000, most of which was spent in having dirt hauled in and graded to alleviate flooding problems.

Tennis courts have yet to be constructed at High Point and the Winston Knolls site. Binder said hopefully with the end of the cement truck drivers' strike, gravel could be brought in this week so construction could start. Grading and landscaping is still needed at High Point, and a parking lot is slated for the park off Glen Lake Road near Hermitage Lane.

Tennis court lighting for the two sites was promised before residents voted on the bond issue. Park commissioners have delayed deciding on installation of lighting until they could determine how much money would be left over in the referendum fund.

SO FAR ABOUT $640,000 of referendum money has been paid out to contractors or been contracted for. Officials estimate other work will cost the district about $143,200.

Other major installation and landscaping are Sloan Park, $8,500 in apparatus and field improvements; Community Pool, $9,000 for a heater; Vogelie Park, $6,000 for playground apparatus and John Muir School park (Poplar Park) $2,000 in improvements.

Park sites which have had apparatus installed or with construction nearly finished total 17.

Delay on completion of the 17 sites was a controversial topic several months ago. The park board fired Avendale Landscaping for not showing interest in completing the contracted projects.

Binder reported the two new landscaping firms hired to finish Avendale's job are nearing the end. Besides landscaping, erosion control work has been done at lake sites.

Hoffman trustees approve 10 more Westbury models

Site plans were approved Monday night for a second model home area in Hoffman Estates' Westbury project.

Allister Construction Co. received village trustees' go ahead for construction of 10 models in the Harperslanding Townhome section of the 497-acre development along Palatine Road north of the Winston Knolls subdivision.

Church of Holy Spirit plans groundbreaking

Church of the Holy Spirit, a new Catholic parish in Schaumburg, will break ground Saturday at 10 a.m. for the worship center at 504 Iverson Ln.

The parish, formerly known as St. Hubert's West, had been operating in conjunction with St. Hubert's Church of Hoffman Estates. The new parish was formally recognized in May by John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago, with its boundaries being Northwest Tollway south to Schaumburg Road and Barrington Road west to Jones Road.

Officiating at the ceremony for the 6,300-square-foot building will be the Rev. George Kane, pastor; Joseph Julian, Schaumburg building commissioner; Joseph Zgonina, Schaumburg building engineer; and Rex Kennedy, Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago building consultant.

Access to the model area will be from Thornbark Drive, rather than Palatine Road, officials of the firm told the village board.

Models will be constructed adjacent to single-family model homes now being built. Opening of the models, planned to sell in the $37,000 to $43,000 range, is scheduled for late December, according to Michael Ives, a planner.

WESTBURY, TO BE developed over a 10-year period, will include 386 single family homes on standard lots and a total of 4,472 residential units in a variety of other styles.

The site is the former Howie-In-The-Hills land, which drew the village into a string of lawsuits pending in courts several years and which cost the village an estimated $100,000 to $120,000 in legal and consulting fees.

The land was sold to Meridian Housing Corp. under a federal court order. Allister Construction Co. is a Meridian subsidiary.

IN OTHER ACTION Monday trustees approved a $7,000 Emergency Employment Act allocation, earmarking funds for a temporary youth counselor.

The worker will be hired as soon as possible with the understanding that the job will terminate March 31, at the end of the village's fiscal year, unless additional funding is provided, said Village Manager George Longmeyer.

The federal grant is being administered by the Cook County Board.

Vandals strip and sharpen tree branches

It seems vandals have discovered new and vicious ways of damaging Schaumburg Park District property. Parks Supt. Ron Dudley told the park board last week.

Three young trees at Falk Park were stripped of their branches, and the trunks sharpened like pencil points, Dudley reported. Shrubs also were damaged at the park site at 1320 W. Wise Rd.

The tree damage and prior fencing vandalism brought repair costs to about $500 for the park, the superintendent said.

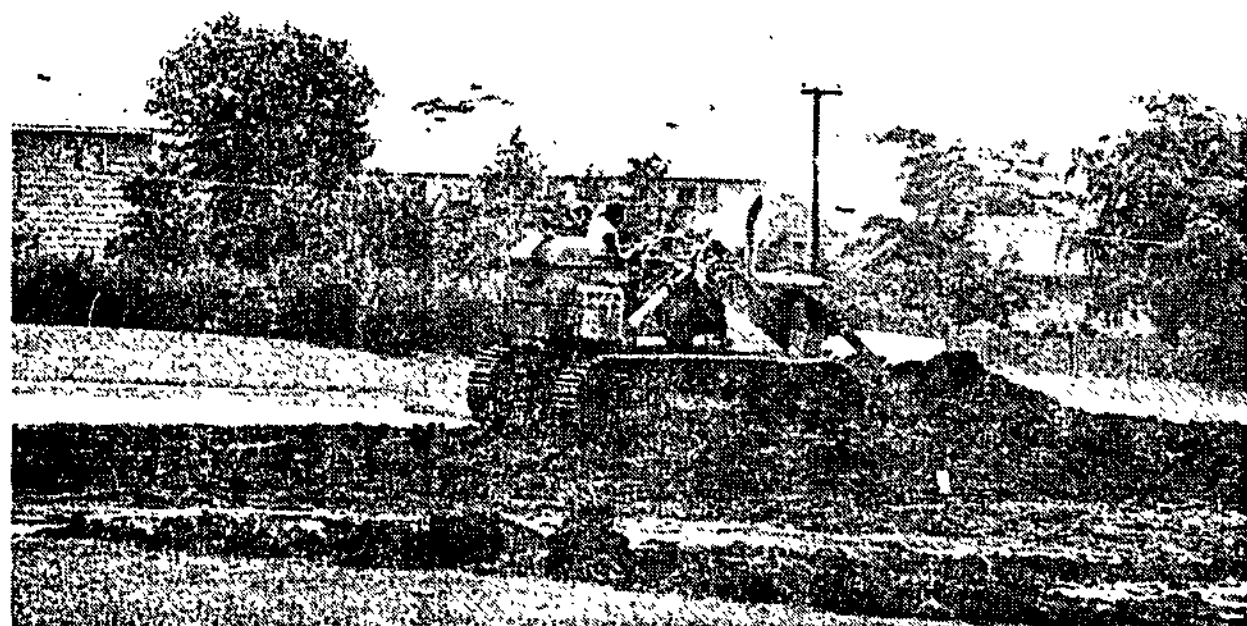

Dudley also told the board that player benches for the baseball diamonds at Dooley School park site had been taken. About $170 worth of wood was required to make the repairs at the site at Lowell and Norwell lanes.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, Duane Hosmer, superintendent of recreation, reported first-week attendance for park

by KURT BAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Buttalo Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Keith Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges "come from" some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting.

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic." "At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists in the program working together, and

Village gearing for big changes

In the wake of Robert O. Atcher's expected retirement from public office next year, Schaumburg is gearing up toward major changes that will make the village presidency a part-time job.

At an informal "coffee-with-the-council" Saturday, village officials are expected to discuss a proposed ordinance creating the post of village manager. Passage of the intended law would follow a referendum in which voters would be asked to adopt the village manager form of local government. It is expected that John Costa, village administrator, would fill the new office.

Contrary to talk of some Schaumburg United Party figures concerning Atcher becoming a candidate for the part-time presidency, he told Schaumburg Rotarians last week he plans to bow out next year.

LIKE CHICAGO'S Mayor Richard J. Daley, Atcher said he has been urged to "go for 20 years" in office, but he pointed out that, unlike Daley, he has his guitar hanging on the wall at home.

Options for his free time after next April, include plans to expand on his "thimble full of knowledge" by going to school and traveling.

Atcher also said he might like to work for Schaumburg as a planning consultant but told of proposed legislation preventing elected officials from working for a community for two years after leaving office. He made it clear, though, that if the law is not passed, he would have to be asked to take such a position since he does not want to be the type of ex-official who is looking over the shoulder of a new man. "No mayor needs that," he asserted.

And right now it looks as if that "new man" could be senior Trustee Ray Kessel.

sell. Kessel said last week he "probably" will seek the presidency, explaining "Bob has asked me" to consider running. But he said he has not made up his mind yet "because things are changing so much these days."

Atcher said Friday there are half a dozen men who could take his place.

TRUSTEE JIM GUTHRIE said he is not interested in the village presidency and expressed a lack of firm decision as to whether he will run for a third term as trustee next year.

On the other hand, Trustee Herbert Aigner, whose term expires in 1977, said he has decided against running for public office again.

Beginnings, a new club owned by Danny Seraphine, a drummer for the rock group "Chicago," will open at Woodfield Commons next month.

Ron Dudley, Schaumburg park superintendent, leads a charmed life. While attending a park equipment show in Deerfield the other day, Dudley admired a toolbox on a display truck and said he'd always wanted something like it. As it turned out, a similar box was being given as a door prize and Dudley won the item, worth about $187, which is now being used by the park district.

Birthday greetings are in order for Schaumburg's Margo Melford, who celebrated last Wednesday, and for former Hoffman Estates village president, Fred Downey, whose Leo birthday is Saturday.

Phil Ossifer thinks it often shows a fine command of the language to say nothing.

Whipple grudge made me quit, teacher charges

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Also Monday, Edith Freund, president of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND SAID she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdice, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN SAID Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. (Continued from Page 1) when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

Teachers in the program, whom Whipple calls "teacher-therapists," have either elementary school teacher certification or certification as learning disability teachers, he said. Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Vandals damage junior high addition

Vandals caused $380 worth of damage Sunday after a break-in at Helen Keller Junior High School's new addition, 820 Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Police were told paint had been smeared on the walls and the windows on three doors had been broken. The addition is under construction. Entry was gained through breaking glass on an outside door.

Park signup underway for 'Odd Couple' trip

Registration is being taken for second-session Schaumburg Park District programs, a family trip to a White Sox game and a special adult trip to see the play, "The Odd Couple."

Trip participants will lunch Wednesday at Johnny's Steak House in downtown Chicago before going to the Auditorium Theatre to see actors Tony Randall and Jack Klugman in the play.

The fee is $16 per person. A bus will leave Melneke Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, about 10:30 a.m. and is expected to return about 6 p.m. Registration is being taken at the park district office in the community center.

About 1,500 children attended the first week of programs in 1970; about 2,270 in 1971; about 3,300 in 1972; about 5,035 in 1973; and about 6,105 in 1974, he said. The figures do not include pool-oriented programs.

The park board awarded a $7,789 contract to Howard L. White and Associates for installation of playground equipment at Collins and Timbercrest parks. Collins Park adjoins Collins School, 407 S. Summit, and Timbercrest Park is at Beech Drive and Hickory Lane.

The board also approved a $2,500 bid by Plote Inc. for excavation and grading work for an east parking lot at Melneke Park, 220 E. Weathersfield Way.

Softball teams tied for first

The men's 16-inch softball program for the Hoffman Estates Park District passed the halfway point last week with Brandy Bull and Ted's Plumbing knotted in a first-place tie with 6-1 records.

Close behind are O'Connell Restaurant and Schaumrose Inn tied for second with 5-2 records.

In Division A of the men's 12-inch softball program, there was a three-way tie for the top spot. The teams were St. Hubert's Green, Barrington Square and Church of the Cross.

In Division B, Hippo's was hotdogging it in first with a 4-0 record. In second were St. John's Lutheran and Flipside Freaks with 3-1 records.

by JOE SWICKARD
A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lylo Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was injured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident. According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices. Dot. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

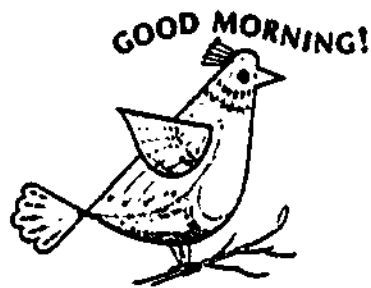

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet. Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Fear influence of organized crime

5-cent tax on cigarettes criticized by merchants

The suggestion that Mount Prospect impose a nickel-a-pack tax on cigarettes met with considerable resistance Monday night as merchants and representatives of tobacco interests claimed it would drive away business and bring in organized crime.

"In this community, it's just too easy to evade the tax," said Paul Himen, 1407 Althea Dr., area manager for Philip Morris Inc. "I don't think anybody has to drive more than five minutes" to cross the village boundary into a municipality that does not tax cigarette sales, he noted. Himen was backed up by Robert D. Heise, executive director of the Illinois Assn. of Tobacco and Candy Distributors, based in Springfield, who contended that besides encouraging residents to go outside Mount Prospect for purchases, a tax would attract bootlegging "not controlled by legal people. It's the Mafia or any other word you want to use. There's too much money involved."

May be safer for children

New boundaries approved at Jay, Forest View schools

A few Mount Prospect children may have a safer way to get to school in the fall. The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education Monday night unanimously approved a boundary change for John Jay and Forest View schools, both in Mount Prospect.

Forest View School they would be bused. A bus for Forest View already picks up children from single-family homes near that area. Students from the region who now go to Jay School, and their younger brothers and sisters, may continue there. However, any new family moving into the area would be assigned to Forest View.

Few children would be affected by this new change because most of the people living in that area are in apartments and have signed leases forbidding children, Ervill said. In other action, the board approved putting a copy of its tentative budget on display for public examination beginning 9 a.m. today. The budget will be displayed at the Dist. 59 business office, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Schools slate budget hearing Aug. 19

The Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Board of Education will hold a public hearing on its proposed 1974-75 tentative budget Aug. 19. The date for the hearing was set by the board at its regular meeting Monday night.

The board is expected to vote on the tentative budget following the hearing as part of its regular meeting activities. At the time the budget is accepted, the board will also set a tax levy for the district.

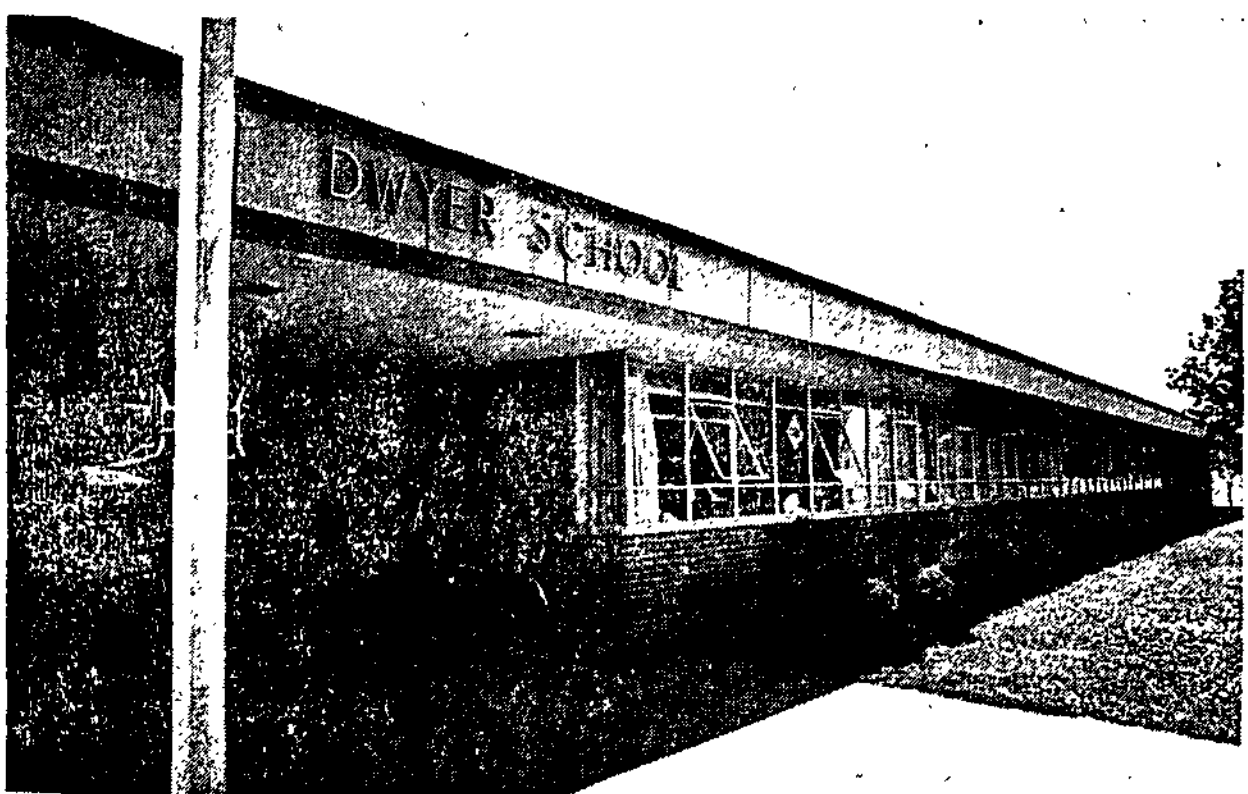

IN OTHER ACTION the board voted to accept the revised policy manual for the district. The manual has been under study by the board's policy committee for the past several months undergoing changes and additions as recommended by the committee, the administration and nonpolicy committee board members. Major revisions in the document, which becomes the district bible for conducting school affairs, include revisions on early admittance policy, the incorporation of criteria for evaluating district personnel, and revising the wording of the document to eliminate generic references such as "he" and "she" and replacing these with more neutral terms.

Village expects to OK annexations

Two annexations are expected to be finalized tonight by the Mount Prospect Village Board. One is for a small shopping center on Algonquin Road, east of Briarwood Drive, that includes a Pizza Hut Restaurant. The other is a vacant plot on Kensington Road, west of Elmhurst Road, that has been earmarked for a small shopping center.

SUMMER SCHOOL IS NOW under way at Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, site of a program for emotionally disturbed children run by the Northwest Education Cooperative. Officials of the program have come under investigation because of charges made by several present and former employees of the program.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT DAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

Whipple defends his conduct

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights. Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Elmhurst Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists in the program working together, and when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

Keith Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Police wrapup

steals stereo set

Even several automatically controlled lights and appliances were not enough to fool the burglar who ransacked the Donald A. Simmons residence, 1766 Camp McDonald Rd., Mount Prospect, Friday night.

Disregarding all the automatic controls, the burglar entered the house between 10 p.m. Friday and 7:15 a.m. Saturday. Two stereo speakers were stolen and a stereo set, which had had an automatic control on it, was moved to a dryer near an open basement window.

The Simmons' was just one of three families who had their houses burglarized while they were on vacation. A television set and a stereo, valued at $1,100, were stolen sometime last week from the Bruce K. Thomas residence, 418 N. Main St. Some $25 in cash was stolen from the Jesus DeAlba residence, 1820 Cree Ln., also last week.

Police said beer cans and gym shoe prints were found outside the DeAlba residence.

Machines burglarized

Twelve laundry machines at four different locations at the St. Johns Apartments in Mount Prospect were burglarized of an unknown amount of cash Thursday night.

The machines were located at 1830 Knights Bridge Dr., 1845 White Chapel Dr., and 1830 and 1845 Heatherleigh Ct., police said. In each case, the machine's coin box was pried open. The machines are owned by S & D Pyramid of Glenview.

Bad check arrest made

A 37-year-old Wheeling man was charged with deceptive practice Friday as he allegedly had written five bad checks, for a total of $350, to the Kohl's Food Store in the Mount Prospect Plaza.

Arrested was James L. Michalczyk, 500 Bernice Ct., who wrote the checks between June 23 and 27, police said. Michalczyk was arrested at his residence. He will appear July 24 in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

$3,000 Harley stolen

A $3,000 white Harley Davidson motorcycle, equipped with a police radio, was stolen last week from a garage at 1503 Canford Cliffs, Mount Prospect police said.

The owner, Thomas A. Laverenz, of that address, said the motorcycle is primarily used for Medinah parades and special events. The motorcycle, which has a Medinah emblem on it, was stolen sometime between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 6 a.m. Friday.

Police also reported an $8,000 Bobcat tractor and a $1,200 trailer were never returned to the A-Z Rental Center, 210 E. Rand Rd., after being rented July 12. A similar theft occurred when a Chicago man rented a $1,000 trailer from the Gulf service station, 705 E. Rand Rd., and did not return it July 8.

Injured treated

Three persons were treated at a local hospital after two separate Sunday afternoon automobile accidents in Mount Prospect.

Gertrude Grogan, 69, of 14 S. Maple Ln., Prospect Heights, received lacerations in a 1:30 p.m. accident at Kensington and Prospect Manor roads. Police said she was southbound on Prospect Manor Road when she pulled in front of a car eastbound on Kensington Road.

The driver of the second car, Donald F. Nueneth, 19, of 121 N. Stevenson Ln., Mount Prospect, was uninjured, police said. No charges have been filed yet in the accident.

The other accident occurred at 1:54 p.m. in the intersection at Northwest Highway and Central Road.

Police said the brief rainstorm Sunday caused the railroad crossing gates and connected traffic signals to stick. A car driven by Norman F. Zitzer, 51, of 1202 W. Campbell St., Arlington Heights, which was eastbound on Central Road, struck a northwest bound car, driven by Stephen Grotkowski, 64, of Brookfield.

Treated at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights were a passenger in each car. They were Emily Grotkowski, 60, and Mary Zitzer, 50. Police said Norman Zitzer was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way at an intersection and will appear Aug. 21 in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

Mount Prospect man
dies in Texas crash

A 23-year-old Mount Prospect man was one of two persons killed last week in a two-car collision in Fort Isadel, Tex.

Thomas A. Andersen, 412 Larkdale Ln., was killed when his car struck another car head-on on the causeway that links Padre Island to the Texas mainland, said a trooper with the Texas Dept. of Public Safety. Both Andersen and the driver of the other car, Donald Whitley of San Benito, Tex., were killed in the 8:30 p.m. Thursday accident, the trooper said.

Police said Andersen was attempting to pass a car when the accident occurred. Two passengers in Andersen's car, reportedly an 18-year-old and a 19-year-old who were Coast Guardsmen and hitchhikers, received only minor injuries, police said.

Andersen was pronounced dead on arrival at the Brownville Medical Center.

Hearing tonight on Busse Road annex

Plans to build 72 apartment units on the west side of Busse Road, south of Algonquin Road, near Mount Prospect, are expected to be aired tonight at a public hearing.

The village's zoning board of appeals will conduct the hearing, beginning at 8 p.m. in the clerk's office of the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Ferlito Realty and Builders, Chicago, is seeking to annex the property to Mount Prospect and rezone it for a planned unit development. The hearing had been scheduled twice previously, but was postponed because of improper legal notice.

Contractors seek to salvage season

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,800 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

The drivers will vote Friday on a proposed pact with the Northern Illinois Ready Mix and Materials Assn. that could end a work stoppage that began

May 15. If the contract is approved, workers are expected to be back on the job by Monday.

The strike has cost an estimated $60 million a day in the construction industry, including numerous partly completed road improvement projects that dot the Northwest suburbs.

NO OFFICIAL contract details are available, but the proposed settlement reportedly includes an increase and wages of $10.50 an hour over a three-year period. Representatives of the drivers and ready mix group met Monday to iron out details of the contract.

A Chicago Federation of Labor spokesman said the 2,800 striking members of the Building Material, Lumber, Box Shaving, Roofing and Insulating, Chauffeurs, Teamsters Warehousemen and Helpers Union will meet Friday to vote on the pact. Locals include: 179, Joliet; 301, Waukegan; 330, Elgin; 423, Aurora; 673, Wheaton; 705, Maywood; and 786, Chicago.

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached, we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

Storm debris may be around for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchhoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS said a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the

discuss building plan

Officials of Kenroy, Inc. of Skokie will attend today's meeting of the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education to discuss their plans to develop the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. in the social studies room at River Trails Junior High, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Kenroy is seeking approval from the Village of Mount Prospect to build 2,350 apartment and condominium units on the 200-acre golf course. The proposed development affects Dist. 26 because more than 500 elementary and junior high school-age students, who would attend Dist. 26 schools, could be generated from the project.

The administration and the school board are opposed to the development because of the number of students it could generate, the increased cost the district would have to assume to educate those children and the increased traffic hazards which may be created near the development. The golf course is located east of Wheeling Road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue.

Golf course theft

Maybe he got a hole-in-one there once.

A thief stole 17 of 18 flags early Sunday from the greens at the Old Orchard Country Club, 700 W. Rand Rd., Mount Prospect, police said.

The flags, valued at $270, were taken between 4 and 7 a.m.

2 subdivisions exempt
from tap-on fee hike

Residents of the Wedgewood Terrace and Prospect Meadows subdivisions in Mount Prospect won't have to worry about an increase in utility tap-on fees.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said the two subdivisions have been exempted from paying the recently-enacted higher rates because work had already begun on installation of sewer and water lines.

Under the new fee schedule, a hook-up onto village utility lines would cost each household as much as $200 extra, Eppley said.

Residents of Wedgewood Terrace, which is bounded by Euclid Avenue on the north, Elmhurst Road on the east and Rand Road on the southwest, already are paying some $3,800 per household over a 10-year period for the installation of sewer and water lines.

Masked gunman captured, hostage saved

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman was captured after he held a woman hostage, disarmed two policemen and held another at bay in an aborted armed robbery of a doctor's office in a noon showdown with Arlington Heights police Monday.

The gunman, tentatively identified as Lyle Ball, 23, of 500 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, held an automatic pistol taken from Det. Scott Rudolph, to the head of the doctor's receptionist Bodil Malmgren, when he used her as a shield to break through a police net thrown around the office of Dr. H. W. Foy, 203 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Miss Malmgren was uninjured in the 15-minute episode which ended when Ball was subdued.

Police said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident.

According to police, Ball and at least one companion entered the doctor's office minutes after Dr. Foy had left for lunch. A worker in another office heard the receptionist scream and telephoned police.

RESPONDING DETECTIVES, after finding a pillow case filled with drugs, cash and a woman's purse began a systematic search of the doctor's offices.

Det. Otto Schuster opened a door of a rear storage room and was confronted by Ball, who was holding a pistol. The pistol was later identified as a gas-powered pellet gun designed to look like a .38-caliber revolver.

"He was just standing there with a woman's hose over his face. He didn't move or say a word," Schuster said. "I ordered him to drop his weapon. He said, 'I've got the woman here. I'm going to kill her if I don't get out.'"

Ball, grasping the receptionist around the neck and holding the gun at her head, started out of the room and backed

Schuster into a doorless drug storage closet.

Keeping the hostage between himself and Schuster, Ball went to the waiting room and out the door. In the vestibule, Ball surprised Det. Rudolph, acting as Schuster's back-up, as he entered.

Ball ordered Rudolph to drop his weapon or the woman would be killed. Rudolph put his Walther PPK .38-caliber automatic pistol on the floor, and Ball picked it up, still keeping his hostage between himself and the policeman.

USING MISS Malmgren as his shield, Ball left the building where he was confronted by policemen with drawn pistols and shotguns. He ignored orders to drop the gun, let the woman go and worked his way around to the back of the building.

The police had cleared the area of spectators drawn from a restaurant across the street and had cordoned off the neighborhood. Police Chief L. W. Calderwood directed the operations at the scene.

The gunman with his hostage ran across backyards and jumped a fence. Police said he tried to drag Miss Malmgren over the fence but lost his grip on her.

Capt. Maurice English then reportedly grabbed the woman as she fell.

POLICE LOST BALL and began a yard-by-yard search for him.

Patrolman Robert Gerth was disarmed by Ball who had hidden in some shrubbery and jumped up behind him.

Another patrolman, William Mols, armed with a shotgun saw Gerth walking with his hands raised. Mols aimed his weapon at some movement in the bushes behind Gerth and ordered Ball to drop his gun.

Ball then broke and ran. As he jumped

If cement truckers' strike ends this week

Paving of Dundee Road expected to resume soon

State officials predicted Monday that paving of Dundee Road will resume by the middle of next week if the strike by cement and material truck drivers ends this week, as expected.

Albert Sifer, project engineer for the Illinois Division of Highways, said workers will be able to pave as soon as cement and other construction materials become available. He said if there are no further delays, all four lanes of Dundee Road should be completed this fall.

"Right now we think we're in pretty good shape," Sifer said. "We're ready to go. All we need now are the materials."

Since the strike started two months ago, Sifer said work crews have done a substantial amount of work to prepare for the resumption of paving. All of the fine grading is completed on two lanes, while a good portion of the sub-base has been installed, Sifer said.

AS SOON AS materials become available, workers should be able to finish installing the sub-base on one portion of the road while paving is being done on another section, he added.

The project consists of widening Dundee Road to four lanes between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53, through Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights. So far, two lanes have been installed from Elmhurst Road to about 300 feet west of Buffalo Grove Road.

After two lanes are paved, traffic will be shifted from the battered existing lanes to the new pavement. The old lanes will then be removed and two new lanes will be installed.

State officials said the road will be safer to travel on after two lanes are completed and traffic is shifted to the new pavement.

In addition to widening Dundee Road, the project consists of hooking up realignments of Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights roads where they intersect Dundee Road. Both roads are realigned to meet existing extensions north of Dundee Road.

OFFICIALS SAID THE realignments will reduce traffic congestion and reduce the number of accidents.

Finally, the $3 million project provides for replacing 900 feet of Arlington Heights Road, north of Dundee Road. That section of road has been in a state of disrepair for more than a year and is now closed to traffic.

Dundee Road has been under some type of construction since September, 1972. Road construction did not begin until last summer, but before that workers were installing new sewers.

Buffalo Grove officials, businessmen and residents have criticized the state Contractors hope to save 'season'

by MARCIA KRAMER

Contractors are making plans to salvage what remains of the summer construction season, now that a tentative settlement has been reached with some 2,000 striking ready-mix drivers and material haulers.

Among the road projects in the Northwest suburbs that came to a standstill during the strike is the $3 million widening of Dundee Road between Elmhurst Road and Ill. Rte. 53. A spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways indicated Monday work could resume by the middle of next week.

The Cook County Highway Dept.'s eight projects in the Northwest suburbs also are expected to resume shortly. "As soon as a conclusion is reached we're going ahead," said Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the department.

AMONG THE county projects stalled by the strike:

Euclid Avenue, from Wolf Road to River Road in Mount Prospect, widening and improvement; Lake-Cook Rd., from Milwaukee Road to Sanders Road, near Wheeling; New Wilke Road, from Golf Road to Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights, drainage improvement; Euclid Avenue, from Roselle Road to Plum Grove Road, partly in Palatine, excavation and drainage; Devon Avenue from Salt Creek to Elmhurst Road, partly in Elk Grove Village, tree removal, drainage and excavation; Lake-Cook Road over the Tri-State Tollway, near Wheeling.

Two other projects on which bids had been awarded but work had not started prior to the strike are expected to be undertaken when the contract is ratified. They are: Palatine Road from Algonquin Road to Roselle Road, cutting through Inverness, Hoffman Estates, South Barrington, Barrington and Barrington Hills, widening and intersection improvement; and Beverly Road over the Northwest Tollway, west of the Poplar Creek Forest Preserve.

State officials forbid Greco, 6110 N. River Road, Rosemont, from bidding on further state projects until they are satisfied with the firm's progress on Dundee Road.

Greco has claimed it is the "scapegoat" for the state and blamed the delays on weather, a cement shortage and now the strike.

Walsh to quit by July 26

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh announced Monday night that he will resign from office by July 26.

In a not-so-surprising statement, Walsh said he may tender his resignation sooner if the village board decides on a successor.

The board met in executive session at the close of last night's regular meeting to take up the matter of an appointed replacement for Walsh.

Walsh is planning to move to Lake Geneva, Wis., where he recently opened the Lakeland Firestone Tire Store.

His Arlington Heights home at 404 E. Marshall St. has been sold and Walsh said Monday night that after July 26 he will no longer be a resident of the village.

Among the persons rumored as possible replacements for Walsh until the village election next spring are Trustees Frank Palmatier, James T. Ryan and Ralph Clabour. Former village president John G. Woods is also considered a possible successor.

Walsh indicated that last night's executive session would be brief and therefore it was not expected to settle the successor question.

Three trustees, including Clabour, also were absent from Monday night's meeting.

SUMMER SCHOOL IS NOW under way at Dwyer Education Cooperative. Officials of the program have School in Arlington Heights, site of a program for emotionally disturbed children run by the Northwest come under investigation because of charges made by several present and former employees of the program.

Teacher says Whipple drove him from field by 'grudge'

by KURT BAER and WANDALYN RICE

One of six teachers who have charged that the program for emotionally disturbed children in Arlington Heights is run improperly, told The Herald Monday he was driven away from teaching because the director of the program had a "personal grudge" against him.

In addition, Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick told officials of the program he will invite them to a public hearing Wednesday on the allegations from the teachers about the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights.

Dwyer School has children from Palatine Township Dist. 15, Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Arlington Heights Dist. 25, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Keith Parrent, a former teacher at Dwyer, said Monday, "I was given a very poor evaluation by people who had never been in my classroom," and that he received almost no supervision while teaching at the school from 1971 to 1973.

Parrent said when he completed his second year of teaching at Dwyer in 1973, he was denied tenure by John Whipple, clinical director of Dwyer, because of his poor evaluation and left the program to take a teaching job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. He has since resigned from Dist. 59 and says he plans to leave teaching entirely.

HE SAID THAT when he was denied tenure, he was offered the chance to teach in the program for a third year on probation, but resigned because it would have meant a salary freeze and a setback to his career.

"The whole thing was shoved right down my throat in a matter of days," he said, adding that "it was the kind of thing that happened all the time."

Parrent's charges are similar to charges made by other teachers who have talked to Martwick's office. However, other teachers have also charged that teachers smoke in classrooms, that children are unnecessarily physically punished and that unqualified staff teach in the program.

Whipple defends his conduct

by WANDALYN RICE

"I felt I was very fair with staff members and I am really saddened by these allegations against me and against the total staff," said John Whipple, clinical director of the NEC programs for emotionally disturbed children Monday.

Charges against Whipple are at the center of an investigation being made by Cook County School Supt. Richard Martwick into the operation of Dwyer School in Arlington Heights, a school for emotionally disturbed children from six school districts. The charges have been made by former and present staff members of the program.

The charges included allegations of unprofessional conduct by staff, including smoking in classrooms, unnecessary physical punishment of students, and the use of unqualified personnel as teachers.

Whipple Monday explained he feels the charges come from "some disgruntled staff members who I had to hold accountable for the results they were getting."

WHIPPLE IS A licensed school psychologist who also has a secondary teaching certificate. He directs not only Dwyer School, but the center for Children and Family Studies which provides counseling for children whose problems are not as severe as those in Dwyer.

He said he has not seen any of the charges against him in writing, even though he has asked for them. In addition, he said he has not received any direct communication from Martwick's office. "It's all been second hand," he said.

Responding to specific charges, Whipple admitted that he does not have an administrative certificate which is required for school administrators in Illinois. However, he said, "My administrator is John Wightman," who is director of all special education programs run by the NEC.

WHIPPLE ALSO said the school's staff has a paddle which is used when staff members in the Dwyer program agree that it is "therapeutic."

"At no time should any type of physical punishment be used when a staff member is angry," he said. "The paddle is not to be used without parent consent and then only after they've tried everything else."

A decision to use the paddle, he said, is made by the teachers and psychologists in the program working together, and, when it is used "it's only one slap on the butt — no more and no where else," he said.

Teachers in the program, whom Whipple calls "teacher-therapists," have either elementary school teacher certification or certification as learning disability teachers, he said. Teacher assistants who do not have teaching credentials work with the teachers. "They are always under a teacher's supervision," he said.

Next year, there will be 80 primary-intermediate grade children in the Dwyer program with 11 teachers, nine assistants, one speech pathologist, and four psychologists or social workers, he said. For the 50 children in the junior high school program, there will be six teachers, six assistants, two psychologists and one learning disability teacher.

ON THE CHARGE that teachers smoke in the classroom, Whipple said, "I'm sure some of them probably do," but he said he has told them the practice is improper and has told them not to do it. "I have told them that if they have to smoke they should find someone to cover their class and go to the lounge," he said.

Generally, Whipple said, "I think this is an outstanding program, and not just because I'm in it." He said that if some teachers are saying he did not properly evaluate them, they are incorrect. "When I'm at Dwyer, I'm constantly in and out of classrooms. I observe them all the time and I talk with their colleagues. I've tried to work with the people and it's unfortunate that they've taken this approach."

Even squirrel can't stop mail

Neither rain, nor snow; gloom of night, nor squirrels can halt the Arlington Heights Post Office from the swift sorting of the mails.

The post office, 909 W. Euclid Ave., was without power Monday morning for almost four hours after a squirrel shorted out an electrical transformer.

A spokesman for the post office said the lights went out shortly after 6 a.m. Power was restored about 9:45 a.m.

The spokesman said three flood lights, rigged up to a gasoline generator normally used to recharge truck batteries as well as the emergency lighting system were brought into play. The sorting of mail and other duties continued during the outage, but at a slower pace, the spokesman said.

The squirrel reportedly paid the ultimate price for venturing into the transformer.

Holiday Park fracas results in 3 arrests

A 19-year-old Arlington Heights man was one of three youths arrested Sunday in a fracas at Holiday Park in Ingleside, Ill., that drew more than 100 policemen.

Michael Nichols, 19, was charged by Lake County sheriff's deputies with disorderly conduct and released on $25 bond after he and several other youths tried to tear apart a raft in the lake, police said.

Police from Lake County and Fox Lake rushed to the scene. One squad car was pelted with stones and a window broken, police said.

Authorities said there were no injuries, but more than 100 policemen from 16 communities arrived at the amusement park to quell the disturbance.

An estimated crowd of 7,000 persons were on hand Sunday, but most did not participate in the melee, police said.

Track fire a dud

Arlington Heights Fire Dept. responded to a suspected fire at Arlington Park Race Track Monday afternoon when an oil leak in a hydraulic garbage compactor caused an electrical pump to overheat sending smoke into the track grandstand.

There was no fire to extinguish and the incident caused little disruption, fire officials said.

NOT ALL OF summer school is spent on reading, writing and arithmetic. Children at Park School in Arlington Heights manage to do a few special projects on their own. John Hanson, 9, left, tries his hand in tie-dyeing material outside on the schoolyard. Grating cabbage for cole slaw is a project for John Hart, 7, right.

Storm debris may remain for weeks

It took the storm only 35 minutes to pass through the Northwest suburbs Sunday, but evidence of its destruction may be present for some time.

Jack Stephens, district superintendent for the Commonwealth Edison Co., Monday said crews are being dispatched to make permanent repairs to damaged wires caused by fierce winds and fallen tree limbs.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said it may take public works employees as long as two weeks to clear away the debris left in the wake of the storm.

WATSON SAID city employees had to use chain saws early Monday morning to cut through fallen tree branches blocking passage on George Street in the city.

He said damage was most extensive in the area near Wilke and Kirchoff roads.

James Bennet, director of public works in Palatine, said it will take village employees a week to clear away fallen branches.

Stephens said almost 3,000 persons in the area were without power until 6 a.m. Monday as a result of the storm.

He estimated that 10,000 persons in the Northwest suburbs lost electrical power during the storm or while preliminary repairs were being made.

Power for most homes, he said, was restored by 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

STEPHENS said a bolt of lightning struck an underground cable at the Countryside Apartment Complex in Palatine, causing a blackout in the area bounded by Colfax Street, Quentin Road, Illinois Avenue, and Hicks Road, until shortly before midnight.

In Arlington Heights, the area near the Arlington Market, Kensington Road and Dryden Place, lost its power until approximately 7 p.m.

Stephens said nearly 700 persons were affected by blackouts near Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street, and Lincoln and Busse Road in Mount Prospect.

"The big problem was trees," Stephens said. "We had branches on wires. We couldn't do much until the trees were cleared, and trying to get tree contractors on a Sunday is another matter."

He said both independent contractors and Edison employees removed fallen branches from the wires.

STEPHENS ALSO said towns outside of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, and Palatine also had power interruptions, which he described as "simpler in nature and pretty well scattered."

He said the company received more than 1,000 calls during the course of the blackouts, and sent out 30 crews to make repairs.

He said the company called in crews from Northbrook and Waukegan to assist.

Teacher charges Whipple's grudge drove him from field of the governing board of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which administers the Dwyer School program, said she received a call from Martwick informing her of a "public hearing" on the charges scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Martwick's Chicago office.

MRS. FREUND SAID she replied by suggesting that Martwick could come to the Northwest suburbs "any evening" to meet with NEC officials. She said, "[I don't know what the other board members will do, but I don't think I can make it by Wednesday — I think it's awfully short notice."

Mrs. Freund said Martwick told her he will send an official invitation to the hearing by registered letter.

In addition to Parrent, a teacher assistant who worked with him, Marie Verdice, described the atmosphere at the school as "lacking in morals or anything wholesome." She said she quit because "other teachers who weren't doing good were being promoted."

In addition, she said, "As an aide, I was really afraid of being left in a room with a teacher I couldn't rely on."

Officials of several of the school districts which send children to Dwyer said Monday that the charges by the teachers did not seem to correspond with what they know of the program.

Attempted theft of 'adult' magazines

Two men were arrested early Saturday for attempting to steal some "adult pictured" magazines from Affiliated Book Distributors, Wheeling police said.

According to police, a witness saw one of the men on the roof of the 415 N. Wolf Rd. building and the other behind the building about 12:20 a.m. Saturday. After police arrived on the scene, they stopped a car that was seen leaving the building area and driving across an adjacent field.

Both occupants of the car were charged with attempted theft and will appear Aug. 6 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court. Arrested were Robert B. Torp Jr., 20, of 705 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling, and Martin R. Seymour, 21, of 908 Braeside Dr., Arlington Heights.

Merle Nevenhoven, director of special education for Dist. 59 said, "My own experience and what is happening now don't seem to have any correlation."

NEVENHOVEN SAID Dist. 59 sends relatively few children to Dwyer because "we handle most of them ourselves," and added that he had in the past had some complaints about the program. He said, "I have indicated to the staff that I'm uncomfortable about the paddle." Staff members have said a paddle is used on children only under certain circumstances.

However, Nevenhoven said Whipple and other staff members had always been responsive to his complaints. "In the past I've criticized some of the staff and I understand he (Whipple) may have let some of them go," he said. "That may be what's causing this problem."

Barbershop chorus takes fifth place

The Arlington Barbershop Chorus captured fifth place Saturday in the 1974 International Chorus Competition in Kansas City, Mo.

The 90-member group competed against 14 other choruses from the United States and Canada. The Thoroughbreds of Louisville, Ky., won first place.

The Southtracks quartet of the Arlington also won fifth place in the quartet competition. The unit competed against 44 other quartet groups. The Soundtracks include Joseph Coburn, lead; Raymond Henders, tenor; Douglas Miller, baritone and Donald Bagley, bass.

The Arlingtines belong to the Arlington Heights chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

The groups were judged for harmony accuracy, balance and blend, interpretation and appearance.

The Arlingtines sang "Alabama Susan Medley" and "Dancing Down in Dixie." Members wore cutaway jackets and porkpie hats to resemble riverboat gamblers.

The competition was held during a five-day convention on barbershop singing. Douglas Miller is the director of the Arlingtines.

Auto pollution tests slated at North Point

The Chicago Lung Assn. will conduct five days of free auto pollution testing Tuesday through Saturday at the North Point Shopping Center near Arlington Heights and Rand roads.

Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. The testing program, which is designed to help motorists improve gas economy and reduce pollution caused by cars, is jointly sponsored by the North Point Shopping Center Merchants Assn., the Village of Arlington Heights, Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission and the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce.

Village officials and civic leaders will attend the official opening of the program at 10 a.m. Tuesday. Special lanes will be set up at the parking lot where cars will be tested by an electronic exhaust emission analyzer.

Motorists will be told whether their car passes air pollution standards. In addition to a written report on each car tested, the motorist will be given a list of suggestions if his car does not pass.

Pair get late start, but streak to Mass

Two Arlington Heights men were arrested for disorderly conduct Sunday after they reportedly streaked the noon Mass at Our Lady of the Wayside Church, Arlington Heights.

Arrested were Charles D. Banta, 20, of 127 S. Dwyer, and William B. Koerner, 20, of 630 S. Newberry.

According to police, the men entered the church and ran up the aisle during services. Banta was captured by ushers and held for police.

Koerner was reportedly captured in a nearby garage by Patrolman Wally Moist who was flagged down by members of the congregation.

Banta and Koerner were released on $1,000 bond pending an Aug. 9 appearance in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Tentative accord on teacher contract

A tentative agreement has been reached between negotiators for the Prospect Heights Education Assn. and the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 Board of Education on a 1974-75 teacher contract.

Terms of the settlement are being withheld, but it is believed a monetary package totalling $106,500 is part of the settlement. This package, which the PHEA had agreed to accept before impasse was called, amounts to an approximate 12 per cent total increase including salary hikes and fringe benefits.

Negotiators met with a mediator for more than five hours last Saturday to work out the agreement. Both sides will meet again Saturday to finalize wording for the contract after which terms of the agreement will be released.

Negotiations were stalled over the issue of a multi-year contract with the board seeking a three-year pact to cover nonsalaried items and the PHEA wanting only a one-year package. The board proposal called for salaries and fringe benefits to be renegotiated annually.

THE NEGOTIATIONS impasse was called more than a month ago and forced the selection of an outside mediator to push the talks past deadlock. Saturday's meeting was the first with the mediator, David Dolnick, selected by both the board and the PHEA.

Ken Bates, PHEA president, said Monday all the major points of the contract are settled but another meeting between the two sides is needed "to tie up a few things and to arrange wording."

When the tentative agreement is finalized, the PHEA membership and the board as a whole must vote to accept it before the contract can take effect.

May be safer for children

New boundaries approved at Jay, Forest View schools

A few Mount Prospect children may have a safer way to get to school in the fall.

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education Monday night unanimously approved a boundary change for John Jay and Forest View schools, both in Mount Prospect.

This change would affect fewer than 25 current students, Supt. James Ervitt said.

The change involved putting a parcel of land now within the Jay boundaries into the Forest View boundaries.

The land is north of Ill. Rte. 62, south of Golf Road, east of Arlington Heights Road and west of Goebbert Road.

PARENTS OF STUDENTS living in that area had been concerned about their children having to cross busy Goebbert Road to get to Jay School.

If the children from that area go to Forest View School they would be bused. A bus for Forest View already picks up children from single-family homes near that area.

Students from the region who now go to Jay School, and their younger brothers and sisters, may continue there.

However, any new family moving into the area would be assigned to Forest View.

Few children would be affected by this new change because most of the people living in that area are in apartments and have signed leases forbidding children, Ervitt said.

In other action, the board approved putting a copy of its tentative budget on display for public examination beginning 9 a.m. today. The budget will be displayed at the Dist. 59 business office, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Monroe to take Kenilworth post

Donald S. Monroe, who served as director of administration and planning for Arlington Heights Elementary School Dist. 25 for the past five years, has resigned to become school superintendent in Kenilworth.

He succeeds Emmett E. Fleming and begins duties this week at elementary Kenilworth School Dist. 38. The one-school district has an enrollment of 665 students.

Monroe, 35, came to Arlington Heights in 1969 as Dist. 25's director of personnel and in-service education. He graduated from Lake Forest College and received his doctorate in educational administration from the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign.
